22 GERMAN GENERALS KILLED IN BIG DRIVE

STIR UP BANKS ON RED CROSS DRIVE

Banks throughout New England are urged to call prompt meetings of their directorates, in order that they may vote contributions to the Red Cross fund this week.

An appeal was sent out today, signed by Alfred L. Aiken for the National Shawmut Bank, Alfred L. Ripley for the Merchants National and Daniel G. Wing for the First National.

Large individual contributions, and large sums from manufacturing and mercantile plants are also coming in. The Pacific Mills, it is understood, have pledged $75,000 to the fund, of which amount Boston will be credited with $24,615.

Reports from towns and cities are coming in slowly, though Vermont is much to the fore today with five large-sized communities over the top. These include Burlington, Montpelier, Brattleboro, Bethel, and Lyndon, the last town being the home of T. N. Vail.

AMONG THE LEADERS.

Massachusetts towns over the top include Weston, which has a quota of $4,200 and raised nearly $5,000; and Marblehead, which raised $6,910, whereas its quota was only $5,500. It was originally reported at Red Cross headquarters that Wellfleet had gone "over the top," but this was due to a mistake in taking the report over the telephone from Wellesley, which should have been credited with the $2,000 assigned until corrected to Wellfleet.

Newport, N. H., is reported having exceeded its quota, and Somerset County, Me., is believed to be the first county in New England oversubscribed.

Only partial figures are available for the drive to date, but present appearances are that New England has already obtained well toward $2,000,000 of its approximately $7,000,000 quota, and that Boston can be credited with fully half this amount.

The latest exact figures obtainable, which have ben far surpassed by now, show that New England's total is $835,000, of which Massachusetts is credited with $753,000, Vermont $26,600 and Maine $52,000. Reports from other States have not been received. Boston figures already tabulated show a total of $627,000.

BATTLE O FITCHBURG.

Large individual contributions in the Boston district include $10,000 each from George Robert White and Mrs. R. W. Emmons, 2d.

All manner of schemes to boom the fund are under way. Perhaps the least common of these is a battle royal, which will be staged in Fitchburg as a publicity device. In Lowell tonight there will be a big parade through the streets, with two bands, and another rally is planned in Charlestown, at which Congressman Tague and others ill speak.

Mansfield and Newton are working vigorously on their campaigns, and many small towns in the State will, it is expected, show large oversubscriptions when the complete returns are in.

Woburn has worked out on ingenious method of showing progress in the drive. Its circular common has been divided into sections, each of which is marked off in thousands. An immense reel, decorated with Red Cross colors, is rolled about the circumference to the proper figure each day.

Inside the common are triangular boards to show the progress of the drive by wards.

RESPONSE IS GRATIFYING.

The following statement was issued today by Edwin S. Webster, chairman of the Metropolitan division:

"The response of Metropolitan Boston to the 2nd Red Cross War Fund has been very gratifying, but it should be borne in mind that the large subscriptions recorded yesterday are the results of weeks of campaigning by Young, president of the Norfolk & Southern railway.

The Virginia railroad company is one of the most important carriers of bituminous coal in the East, much of the navy supply being transported over its lines. When the railroads were taken over by the government Mr. McAdoo ordered that the Virginia make certain improvements. AID TO RUSSIA WHOLLY UP TO WILSON

President's Advisers Insist That Intervention in Any Form Will Be Fatal

By JOHN McHUGH STUART,
Staff Correspondent of International News Service.

Washington, May 21.—President Wilson has been called upon to make the most difficult decision of the whole war—how to make good his pledge to help Russia. It is learned here that the decision rests practically in Mr. Wilson's hands alone. Following the pledge he gave in his Red Cross speech in New York Saturday night, he must quickly adopt one of these two widely divergent views:

1—France first of all, and also Italy and England have made strong representations that the Russian situation cannot be worse. They believe that Allied intervention, with the Japanese and Chinese, can have no effect worse than the present state of affairs. They believe that it may go far towards winning the war on the Western front.

2—Many of the President's own advisers insist that intervention of any sort will be fatal—that it will drive Russia body, boots and breeches into the German camp. The latter got remarkable confirmation of their opinion in an exclusive interview granted to the International News Service by Dr. Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, Czech member of the Austrian Parliament, who is under sentence of death for leaving Austria when the war broke and who has just arrived in Washington from Russia, where he was intimately connected with both the Kerensky and Bolshevikl regimes.

Dr. Masaryk says the only way to treat Russia is to recognize and deal with the de facto government and help the people economically back to the peace and relative prosperity which they seek above all.

LUFBERY, 'ACE,' AVENGED BY COMRADES

Announcement Made at Impressive Military Funeral of American Aviator

By NEWTON C. PARKE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army in France, May 21.—Major Raoul Lufbery has been avenged. That was made certain when at the American "ace's" funeral a major-general announced that the German plane that shot down Lufbery was brought down by a French aviator.

While American and French airplanes droned overhead, Lufbery's body was buried with full military honors in a sunny field of buttercups near Toul.

The commander of a French army corps and an American major-general under whom Lufbery served as a private in the American army years ago, scores of American and French aviators and many others paid homage to America's premier airman.

START FROM HOSPITAL.

The funeral procession started from the American hospital where Lufbery's body had reposed since he fell. A band, with muffled drums, led the way. Behind came the casket, draped with American flags. The bearers, Major ——— (deleted), Captain Marr, Captain Peterson and three other fliers walked beside the casket.

The casket was taken to the burying ground on a truck which was laden with huge wreaths of flowers sent by American and French officers and civilian admirers. The truck was far too small to carry all the wreaths, so behind came several sturdy Moroccans with their red fezes, carrying other pieces. The French corps commander and the American general led the procession, with American and French officers following.

As the procession made its way slowly along the road to the cemetery a little French boy darted from the throng of French civilians and handed the driver of the truck carrying the casket a huge bouquet with a card inscribed:

"From his little French friends."

AMID ROAR OF ARTILLERY.

White-robed nurses were drawn up alongside the road as the head of the procession reached the spot where several other American heroes are buried. The band softly played, "Near, My God, to Thee," and it was

ALLIES WIN CONTROL IN AIR

Ninety Per Cent. of Aerial Battles Within German Lines; City of Bethune Burning

By International News Service.

New York, May 21.—Twenty-two German regimental commanders have been killed since Germany launched her offensive in the West, according to advices received by the British mission in this country here today. German regimental commanders correspond to Brigadier-Generals in the British army. Advices also say that since March 21 90 per cent. of the air battles have been over the German lines, due to allied air supremacy.

By International News Service.

London, May 21.—The French city of Bethune, just behind the Flanders battle front, has been set on fire by incendiary shells from German artillery and is in flames, said a news agency dispatch from the front today.

The famous Bethune Cathedral is in ruins, says a news agency dispatch from the front today.

Bethune is an important British railhead position between 17 and 18 miles north of Arras. It is one of the local objectives of the Germans, who have delivered numerous blows in an effort to break through at that point and seize the railroad. At the present time the German line lies about three and one half miles from Bethune.

A successful operation was carried out by the British on Monday in the sector of Merville, the War Office announced today.

The Germans delivered a counter-attack, but it was broken down.

(Merville is between seven and eight miles north of the British railhead position at Bethune on the Flanders battle front. It lies upon the Lys River.)

BRITISH TAKE PRISONERS

The successful British enterprise was carried out by a Surrey battalion. Not only did the British improve and extend their lines, but captured thirty prisoners and six machine guns as well.

Southeast of Arras the British raided German trenches, capturing some prisoners and a machine gun.

German artillery was active in the Albert and Hebuterne sectors during the night. The German guns increased the intensity of their fire between the Somme River east of Arrasi.

The gas shelling reported yesterday north of Bethune was very heavy.

LINES RESTORED.

The text of the official report follows:

"A successful operation carried out by troops from a Surrey battalion yesterday evening northwest of Merville restored the British lines. We captured thirty prisoners and six machine guns.

"Early this morning a hostile counter attack against our new positions, delivered after a heavy bombardment, was broken up by our artillery and machine gun fire.

"We carried out a successful raid southeast of Arras and captured a few prisoners and a machine gun.

"During the night the hostile artillery was active in the Albert sector, around Hebuterne and between the Nieppe forest and Meteren.

"There was more than the usual artillery activity between the Scarpe and hill No. 70 and north of Lens.

"The gas shelling reported yesterday north of Bethune was heavy."

FRENCH RAID THE ENEMY.

Heavy artillery duels continue on the Picardy front, southeast of Amiens. The French War Office announced today that French patrols captured prisoners at three points.

The text of the Paris communique follows:

"There are artillery duels in the region of Thennes, Hailles and south of the Avre River.

"French patrols raided German positions southwest of Lassigny, on the western bank of the Ancre River (Verdun front) and in Lorraine."

Ukrainian Dictator Wounded in Fighting With the Anti-Germans

By International News Service.

Berne, May 21.—General Skoropadski, who recently proclaimed himself Hetman of the Ukrainians, has been gravely wounded in the street fighting in Kiev, the capital of Ukrainia, according to information received here today.

The Hetman's palace was besieged and attacked several times by troops faithful to the old anti-German government.

A state of civil war has grown out of the revolt against Germany. General von Eichorn, commander of the Austro-German forces, has received orders to put down the rebellion.

It is now believed that the German authorities will assume full control in Ukrainia and that the new government at Kiev will be dismissed. This dismissition would give Germany an opportunity to rush food and cattle to their own countries.

It is reported that Germany will soon declare the old paper money in Russia worthless and will substitute German currency, which will be the sole legal tender.

French Gain at Locre Menaces Hun Position on Strategic Mt. Kemmel

By FRANK CHARLTON,
International News Service Cable Editor.

The magnificent success of the French in the Locre sector of the Flanders battle front is menacing the grip of the Germans on the all important Kemmel hill, six miles southwest of Ypres.

French troops gained highly important ground in the hill country over a front of 4,000 yards, creeping nearer to the height of Kemmel itself, which the Germans captured at such enormous cost of human life.

To use the expression made famous by Marshal Joffre, the Anglo-British forces on the battlefronts are "nibbling" at the German lines in a series of highly successful minor operations, but while these enterprises are called local in comparison with the mighty battles that have been raging on the Picardy and Flanders battlefields, earlier in the war they would have been called big engagements.

BRITISH GAIN GROUND.

Following the capture of Ville-sur-Ancre on the northern end of the Picardy front, the British attacked on the southern end of the Flanders zone last night, gaining ground near Merville.

Merville lies from seven to eight miles northwest of the British railhead and base position of Bethune, in the district where the Germans have been heavily shelling the allied lines for some days.

Gigantic duels with big guns continue over the greater part of the two battle zones. North of Albert, in the Hebuterne zone, where many European war critics look for the next German blows to fall, there was intense shelling, and also between the Nieppe forest and Meteren, about mid-way along the Flanders battle line.

East of Arras and from the Scarpe River to Hill No. 70, north of Lens, the Germans have increased their artillery activity.

HEAVY FIRE NEAR ARRAS

It is a notable fact that the Germans have been concentrating their heaviest fire around Arras.

Vimy ridge, which the British hold, lies in the zone where the Germans have strengthened their fire. The British position was one of the objectives of the Germans when they launched their big smash in the Arras zone last month, but the Teutons were hurled back by the gallant defence of the British defenders and were unable to gain any ground whatsoever. It is possible that they contemplate another blow for this strategic height.

Economic War on Swiss Denied by France

By International News Service.

Paris, May 21.—In a note to Switzerland with regard to the coal situation, the French government says, that if Germany "jingly insinuates" that France is threatening Switzerland with an economic war, "she confounds Switzerland with herself."

The note goes on to say, toward Switzerland, and says if Switzerland's sovereignty is affected by the German encroachments, France "will know how to take measures supporting with the protection of our interests." It promises French aid despite the Swiss-German economic agreement.

France offers to continue sending Swiss factories working for the Allies the amount of coal necessary for their needs. The note is mildly reproachful on the failure of Switzerland to accept the Allied offer.

drowned out part of the time by the roar of the nearby artillery.

Aviators circling overhead dropped roses as the procession lined up beside the grave. Infantry was drawn up on the north side of the grave and the aviators on the opposite, as the chaplain read the burial service. When it was concluded the French corps commander stepped forward.

"In behalf of my comrades in the French army I wish to pay here reverential and fraternal tribute to the body of one of the heroes of the air, a victor eighteen times," he said. "He was a son of a noble, generous republic which came to our assistance to save the liberties of the world.

"Short, peaceful, Major Lufbery. Close to the martyrs of our great cause your glorious example will consummate in us the desire and spirit of sacrifice until the day when humanity's enemy shall be finally vanquished forever. Au revoir."

The American general and an American aviation corps colonel then paid brief tributes, following which the body was lowered into the grave.

COMRADES IN TEARS.

Lufbery's comrade were weeping as were the assembled nurses as the firing squad fired three volleys above the open grave. The bugler sounded taps, to which came faint responding taps from a bugler stationed in the woods across the way. The procession reformed and the band struck up a lively march, according to military custom, and the aviators hastened back to their duties.

Though the French morning newspapers in this region carried no news of Lufbery's death, it spread rapidly and was the sole topic of conversation in the restaurants of Nancy and Toul.

Stimpson, Killed in France, Enlisted Just Year Ago Today

Another gold star was added to Somerville's service flag today when the name of Private George C. Stimpson appeared on the latest casualty list as having died of accident.

Private Stimpson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stimpson of No. 4 Wellington avenue. He was born in Somerville and attended the Somerville schools. The news of his death comes just a year from the date of enlistment, Stimpson having enrolled on the 21st of May, 1917. He enlisted in M Company of the Eighth Regiment, went to Lynnfield and later to Camp Bartlett. He was twenty-one years old.

A brother, Norman, is a private in the Supply Company, Eightieth Field Artillery and is training in Texas.

U. S. RIFLE FIRE TOO HOT FOR GERMANS

Attempted Raid on American Patrol Foiled by Guns of Yankee Boys

By BERT FORD,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army on the French battlefront, May 20.—(Noon).—A strong boche patrol attempted to surround part of an American patrol at dawn, but the main body poured in such a hot rifle fire that the enemy was scattered. The Germans used both hand grenades and rifles.

During the night our front line is occasionally kept under machine gun fire. The boche artillery and infantry, however, are unusually quiet.

When they bombard the Germans use quite a number of high explosive shells made from galvanized iron. These have been nicknamed "U. I. Buckets" by the doughboys.

The artillery on both sides are busy.

The American doughboys are still hunting for a name that will fit both the Southern and Northern States. The suggestion has been made that they be called "Yankee-Dixie boys" instead of "Yanks doodle boys." It is said that this will be a compromise for both the South and the North, giving each a place in the title.

The concensus of opinion is that Yankee should have a part in any nickname that is chosen.

Thomas Burke, an English author, has suggested that the Americans be called "Attaboys," which is typical of American pep.

It is said that the Germans will soon renew their offensive now and the Americans are getting impatient to pitch in.

Our casualties from gas and shrapnel continue normal.

UPHOLD 9-HOUR RULE FOR SIGNAL TOWER MEN

Washington, May 21.—The Supreme Court has sustained the decision of the lower courts, holding that railroad employees engaged in dispatching at signal towers, even when they are engaged only in the movement of trains in yards, and operating under telephone directions, must not work longer than nine hours a day. The case had been taken to the high court because of a difference in opinions in lower courts as to whether such men could be worked under the law, nine hours of sixteen hours in any twenty-four. The case was brought against the Chicago & Alton Railroad.

'GOD FORGIVE ME FOR THE HOUSE I HAVE SPOILED,' WROTE MISS LUSK

TRAGEDY NOTE DISCLOSES HER "MORALS" CODE, READ AT TRIAL

By International News Service.

Waukesha, Wis., May 21.—Grace Lusk's code of "morals" was disclosed today in the crowded courtroom where she is on trial for the murder of Mrs. Mary Roberts, wife of Dr. David Roberts, for whose love Grace Lusk slew. It came out in a note written by Grace Lusk as she lay bleeding from self-inflicted wounds after she killed the rival for her heart's affection.

The note was brief. It said:

"This is the work of a man who said he loved me. God forgive me. Pay Hiance, for the house I have spoiled."

And then was introduced a document, carefully written by Miss Lusk, in which her code of morals were drawn and displayed her effort to dissect her fevered heart for the world that would not understand. To it she seeks to excuse all she had done and was about to do.

INSANITY DEFENCE.

By this document the State hopes to show that the murder was deliberately planned, and the defence hopes to prove by the same token that only an insane woman could have written such epistles. Here it is:

"It's a bit hard to write this—for the majority of the folk who don't care for me and who have been so active in criticising me, I have no explanation. I should have known better than to play with fire.

I should have known that men have one code of honor for the women they love and another for the women to whom they are married.

I have had the theory that love between men and women was stronger than all the legal ceremonies in the world—when that was lacking there was no sanctity in marriage. I still believe so—but the man in the case has been too much of a coward to face his wife and tell her the truth—he has never been true to her.

"MUST BE AFRAID OF ME."

"Now that I have had to suffer, I am going to insist that he tell her how matters stand; that he be honest with her. If he will not, he is still afraid; he will have to be afraid of me this time.

"I am not the type of woman to be lied to. Oh, I am sorry, sorry, sorry that this happened, and yet I had rather have had this experience, painful as it has been, than to have gone through life without knowing what love can mean. I can't honestly feel that I have been 'sinful.' We have cared so much for each other as a man or woman can. The only treason has been in not telling Mrs. R. I have always wanted, but he was afraid. Ah, well, it will soon be over. I am not afraid. I have loved my friends very dearly. I have made my work my religion. I have tried very hard to put the best there was in me into it.

SHE QUOTES LATIN.

"Labor est orata," sang the monks in the olden times. God, my brothers, takes our toil for homage sweet. I hope dear father doesn't take it too hard. I have never caused him so very much worry. I want him to forgive me. I just can't live as I have been living these last few weeks—I have been almost crazed with heart aches and humiliation. Please give enclosed letter unopened as addressed."

How she prepared for the tragic end of her romance to the last detail was bared in another document enclosed in an envelope which said: "Open in case of accident only."

She said she didn't want much fuss over her funeral. Only a little prayer. She wanted to be laid in her "new gray party dress."

Her turquoise pin and two diamond rings she also wanted. Then she told how she wanted her money disposed of.

"Little David" Is Called a Liar by Dr. Lusk at Trial

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Waukesha, Wis., May 21.—The Lusk family do not believe in sitting quietly while "Little David" hurls his slings at them. Last week it was Grace and yesterday it was her father.

Old Doctor Lusk loomed a formidable and successful Goliath when Dr. Roberts gave some testimony that reflected on his daughter.

"That's a lie," the indignant father shouted when the veterinarian told of meeting Miss Lusk and her father on a suburban trolley car and the girl, when her father was not looking, slipped him a note making an appointment for the Wisconsin Hotel at Milwaukee. He said when he met her there he inquired how she had got rid of her father.

BOUGHT FATHER NEW HAT.

"Oh I bought him a new hat and sent him back to Waukesha," she said, according to "Little David."

Miss Lusk seemed much disturbed at the mention of this episode and the tears streamed down her father's cheeks.

Then little David, who is as dexterous at throwing bouquets at himself as she is at throwing slings at the Lusks, told how he scolded Grace for treating her father so shabbily and said he did not care to take any woman to lunch who could treat a parent that way.

It never seemed to the self-righteous critic that he was treating Mrs. Roberts pretty shabbily in going about the country with another woman and registering with her at various hotels as his wife.

"THE MODEL HUSBAND."

The picture that he tries to flash on the screen of public opinion is that of the model husband, who fell on a long quest for pure English. We had more of his book, "Cattle Breeds and Their Origin."

The ex-State veterinarian is certainly a formible warning to little boys never to neglect their parts of speech. Had David Roberts known his English grammar, that long, long weary quest for sentences that would parse might never had led him into the siren toils of Grace Lusk.

Apparently it isn't all fun in the "foolish age," even when home ties and responsibility are utterly disregarded. Today Dr. Roberts told how, Miss Lusk punched he in eye on occasion on trip. They were gathering flowers as happy as could be when Miss Lusk again put her eternal question.

HE WAS SHOCKED.

"Do you love me better than any other woman in the world, and are you going to tell your wife so?"

And as usual, the model husband was shocked and said:

"No, that is impossible."

Then, according to Dr. Roberts, Miss Lusk punched him in his right eye.

"Did you look at her then?"

"No, sir, not with my right eye."

"What happened then?"

"I suffered."

The spectators laughed, perhaps "suffered" is not too strong a word to use in some cases, and Judge Lueck threatened to clear the court room.

The sufferings of the model husband on his various "English" trips evoke no sympathy. Tattling in man is not a heroic virtue. Adam's lack of chivalry in regard to the apple never won him any popularity with his descendants and the Waukesha veterinarian is not faring any better.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months. —Advertisement members of our committee among the more prominent of our citizens.

"The success of the campaign depends upon the contributions of those whose means enable them to give moderate amounts, and let me emphasize that it is equally a matter of conscience as to what a man shall give, whether his possessions be much, moderate or little.

"The Red Cross is an appeal to all. There must be no silent and the gift of the capitalist and wage-earner alike is a free-will offering. We must have a universal response from all our people irrespective of what their possessions may be or their race, creed or anything save that they are American at heart.

"Let me repeat. To make the Red Cross campaign a triumphant success it depends upon the aggregate of the givers of moderate and small amounts."

TRIBUTE TO RED CROSS BY DANIELS

Editor Boston American:--The Red Cross is the heart of the military service of our days just as the aircraft is the eyes of the army and navy. Surgeons and Red Cross nurses are upon the firing line and in the fighting craft and no man may reckon the value of their deeds of mercy or compute the lives they have blessed. The beneficial service of this international organization has won the gratitude of the whole world and has more than justified our confidence in its great usefulness. A dollar invested in the Red Cross will bring a hundred per cent. dividend in the well-being of the men at the front.

ENEMY FEELING PINCH OF HUNGER

By International News Service.

Zurich, May 21.—The reduction of the bread ration in Germany is arousing grave protests from the working classes. The Socialist organ Vorwaerts of Berlin, in exhorting the working men to remain calm, said: "This measure troubles profoundly millions of Germans, for bread and potatoes are our staff of life in war time. Up to now they have been distributed in meagre supply, and it seems too dangerous to try to reduce the rations.

"The danger is greater now in the fourth year of the war than in the second or third when it was easier to procure other foods and the general health of the people was better.

"The moral and physical forces aiding us to withstand the privations in the fourth year are much diminished."

The Karlsruhe newspaper, "The People's Friend," expressed deep chagrin that the diminution should come when the people were expecting relief from Ukrainia and Rumania.

"Last year it was meat and now there is a diminishment of the bread ration when there is no compensation with other foods" said the Karlsruhe paper. "It will go bad if the authorities do not seize the stores of Ukrainian and Rumanian peasants with ruthless energy."

The Catholic organ, Germania, said: "We have never been optimistic, now our pessimism is greater than ever."

"HONORABLE PEACE" GERMANY'S HOPE THIS YEAR

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, May 21.—"Germany expects an honorable end of the war this year," said Von Richthofen, leader of the left group of National Liberals in the Reichstag in an interview obtained by the Berlin correspondent of the New Journal of Vienna, according to information received here today.

Dr. Von Kuehlmann, German Foreign Secretary, was quoted in an interview in the Vienna press as saying:

"The new Austro-German alliance is not intended to divide the world into two hostile camps. The object of the alliance is to guard the world's peace."

German agents are busy in Austria endeavoring to allay the public distrust of the new compact.

GOVERNMENT STATES ATTITUDE ON STRIKES

Providence, May 21.—Labor agitators at Bristol were told by army and navy representatives that while the government did not object to men unionizing for their betterment, the claims must be founded on reason or those responsible for any difficulty would be dealt with accordingly. This is the result of an alleged effort on the part of several labor leaders of foreign birth to cause a strike at the National India Rubber Company, now working on government contract.

PROBE ACTIONS OF U. S. IRISH LEADERS

By International News Service.

Washington, May 21.—The Department of Justice may take action against some of the Irish leaders in America, following the belligerent anti-British expressions at the Irish convention in New York.

Officials here have been in telephone consultation with the Federal agents in New York, it was admitted, and are awaiting further formal reports.

Although there was no denial that investigations have been going on of those anti-British Irish suspected of leaning toward Germany for support against England, department officials would not admit they had furnished any part of the evidence on which England based its action in the round up of the Sinn Fein leaders.

All inquiry on that score was referred to the State Department.

16 DIRECTORS ARE ELECTED BY THE CHAMBER

Several Vacancies Caused by Members' Entrance Into Government Work

For the first time since the reorganization in 1906, sixteen directors instead of the customary eight, were elected at the annual meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce today.

The reason for so many vacancies on the board was due to the fact that many of the directors have been called by the government to co-ordinate and speed up war activities.

Among the directors who resigned were Stanley King, now assistant secretary of war; Howard Coonley, vice president of the Shipping Board; Louis E. Kirstein, in charge of purchasing uniforms; and Mayor Peters.

The following were elected directors:

FOR THREE YEARS.

George Bramwell Baker, Baker, Ayling & Young.

Clifton H. Dwinnell, First National Bank.

William D. Fulton, grain.

S. Harold Greene, The Lawton Mills Corporation, cottons.

James H. Hustis, Boston & Maine Railroad.

John R. Macomber, Harris, Forbes Co., inc.

Frank W. Remick, Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Ralph A. Stewart, Choate, Hall & Stewart.

FOR TWO YEARS.

Charles B. Davis, General Electric Company.

Robert A. Woods, head resident, South End House.

FOR ONE YEAR.

Henry E. Botsfield, real estate.

Charles W. Whittier, C. W. Whittier & Brother, real estate.

The annual meeting was held in the library, and called the largest attendance in years. President Henry L. Harriman announced that the subject for discussion was the Americanization of the immigrant. President Harriman retires from office as does at the newly-elected Board of Directors can choose his successor.

URGES ALIENS' EDUCATION.

He told of the work the Chamber has done in the past year in connection with Americanizing immigrants, and took up the plan which is now being worked out. This Dale plan the Chamber will be able to come into direct contact with every immigrant in Boston through the organizations covering every block in the 218 schol ;districts. The Chamber also hopes to prevent exploitations.

Dr. Roberts, the chief speaker, who is an authority on the immigrant, praised the Chambers' plan, particularly in connection with the prevention of exploitation. He declared that anarchy and extreme radicalism were largely due to exploitation of the foreign-born people. The speaker stated that education is the best means to employ.

ARREST MAUDE GONNE, WIDOW OF McBRIDE

By International News Service.

Dublin, May 21.—Miss Maud Gonne, widow of Major McBride, who was one of those executed as the result of the Easter revolt, has been arrested in connection with the alleged German-Sinn Fein plot. It is understood that the most prominent of the Sinn Feiners arrested are now in the Tower of London.

The standing committee of the Mansion House anti-conscription conference discussed conscription, and Professor McNeill and Alderman Kelly were nominated to succeed De Valera and Griffith, respectively.

London, May 21.—The official press bureau announced today that it will shortly issue a statement regarding the criminality of the Sinn Feiners with the enemy.

POSTERS WRONG SIDE OUT STIR MEDFORD CITIZENS

Much excitement was occasioned in Medford square when a prominent storekeeper was found to have several Red Cross and Liberty loan posters in his windows turned blank side out. Somebody reported that the dealer was pro-German and quite a crowd collected.

The merchant had absent-mindedly stuck the posters to his windows facing inward, and when the matter was called to his attention quickly turned them right side out.

ARTIST RANGER'S SISTER HELD IN WILL DISPUTE

New York, May 21.—Miss Edith Ranger was arraigned before Judge Crain in General Sessions, charged with conspiracy and subornation of perjury. Her arrest resulted from the filing of a will, said to be fraudulent, in which she was named as the beneficiary of the estate of her brother, Henry W. Ranger, the famous American artist, who died November 7, 1916, leaving more than $250,000.

According to Assistant District Attorney Niner, the will was drawn by Charles S. Wexler, a lawyer of Stamford, Ct.

The original will was admitted to probate January 3, 1917. By its provisions a life interest in the estate was left to Mrs. Nellie Ranger, widow of the artist. At her death the entire estate was to revert to the National Academy of Design.

Under the alleged fraudulent will the name of Edith Ranger is substituted for the name of Mrs. Ranger, and all previous wills are revoked.

After many hearings before Surrogate Fowler, the attention of District Attorney Swann was called to conflicting statements and all papers were turned over to him.

Mr. Niner states that Wexler made a confession in which he said he drew the fraudulent will after a conference on January 15 with Miss Ranger and two others in Stamford. According to Wexler's reported statement he copied the will on a typewriter from a long hand copy presented by Miss Ranger.

Miss Ranger was arrested by Detective Cunliffe. She was accompanied to court by her lawyer, Theodore F. Von Dorn. She said she is fifty-five years old and lives at No. 211 West Fifty-fifth street. She was admitted to $6,000 bail.

Two other persons, not yet arrested, have been indicted.

HUNGRY BURGLARS' MEAL INTERRUPTED

The fact that a sandwich in the hand is worth a whole lot of food on a table was brought home to two fastidious burglars who were frightened away from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick H. Shea, No. 652 South street, Roslindale. The men gained entrance through a window during the absence of the family. After securing a dozen silver spoons they decided to refresh themselves. They set a table on the piazza. The return of Mrs. Shea broke up the party.

German Lies Drive Chinese Students From Japan

By FRANK H. KING,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Tokio, May 21.—Five thousand Chinese students have left Japan, and every remaining Chinese student is preparing to depart, owing to ill-feeling created by enemy propaganda over the secret Japanese-Chinese negotiations.

Foreign Minister Goto, in a recent public statement, declared the negotiations were solely for the protection of the allied interests in the Far East against German aggression, and that Japan had no selfish interests, and no intention to take advantage of China as a result of the Russian crisis.

Friction among civilians is declared to be entirely due to German agents who are spreading anti-Japanese propaganda in China and is not shared by the Chinese and Japanese governments.

The men were arrested following a spectacular open-air raid, when they were hunted across country by the police in automobiles. LOSES $500 BY OLD HANDKERCHIEF GAME

Samuel Lewis of Chambers street complained to the police today that he had been robbed of $500 by two strangers by the "handkerchief game." He met them at Pinckney and Charles streets. They were going back to the old country to fight and wanted somebody to hold their money. Lewis said he would hold it. They asked him to put up a like amount. Lewis went to the bank and drew out $500 which, with the money of the strangers was apparently placed in a handkerchief and given to Lewis to hold. Later he found the handkerchief contained only old newspapers.

SEEK HIGHER FARE FROM PINEHURST TO BOSTON

Washington, May 21.—The Norfolk & Southern Railway company applied today to the Interstate Commerce Commission for permission to cancel the one way party rate of $8.80 per person for parties of five or more from Pinehurst, N. C., to New York city, and to apply instead a rate of $12.75 per person for parties of ten or more. The road also asked for the cancellation of the one way fare of $11 from Pinehurst to Boston and Providence, substituting $16.75 to Boston and $14.25 to Providence.

CONTROVERSY ON STRIKE DENIED BY ENDICOTT

Henry B. Endicott, executive manager of the Massachusetts Public Safety Committee and representative of the United States War Department, denies that there is a controversy between him and Charles G. Wood, member of the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration over the settlement of a strike at Easthampton.

"I have had no controversy with the gentleman," said Mr. Endicott. "I never have met him that I remember. All I wish to say is that I was asked by the employes and the West Boylston Manufacturing Company to arbitrate their differences, and they agreed to abide by my decision. I agreed to arbitrate, and notified both parties if I did so the employes must go back to work and this they agreed to do. They agreed to go back to work yesterday. I called a meeting in Easthampton for today to hear both sides."

Mr. Endicott further stated that he was asked by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker to do everything possible to get the men back at work and prevent further delay in the production of duck, large quantities of which are needed by the government.

He added that he made an exception to his rule by going to the place where the differences existed, in order to save the employes of the West Boylston Manufacturing Company the expense of coming to Boston, and also to avert interruption in this important war work.

Others accompanying Mr. Endicott to Easthampton were John F. Stevens, labor representative on Massachusetts Public Safety Committee; H. Preston Clark and W. Rodman Peabody of the Public Safety Committee.

We shall complete this distribution precisely as planned, but when the limit of twenty thousand sets is reached, that will be the end —and we are nearly there now.

Have you, dear madam, asked for your set? If not, take the solemn assurance from us that this is the final opportunity. It is not likely that you will ever see this offer again. Then you'll have your whole life to regret it if you don't act NOW.

We'll send the set direct from the factory to your dining-room for you to use and enjoy thirty days before remitting the first small payment of $1.50.

You like inanimate companions, well as those of flesh and blood, that are good thru and thru. Hence, in the selection of your home-furnishings you avoid the tawdry and the sham, and choose those better expressions of refinement and good taste. And that is why you have always admired GENUINE cut glassware. But the prices in retail stores have been so high that persons of moderate means could afford only two or three pieces, at most; whereas, here are eighteen perfectly matched pieces, every one of them useful as well as beautiful; and the price of the entire set is probably less than you have paid for any single piece that you may now have.

Fashions

Though no one would dispute the right of Paris to maintain her title as Fashion Centre of the World, "American fashions for American women" has become a popular slogan.

The fashion requirements of American women can best be catered to by designers of their own people, who can and do produce clothes ideally suited to the needs of American life. Our exhibit of "Made in the U. S. A." wearing apparel for women and girls includes garments for every occasion, and features especially the Calico Gowns, a distinctively American idea, now in vogue, and reminiscent of Civil War days.

in styles and materials suitable for the varying phases of American business and social life and to the tastes and preferences of American women.

War Fashions

The war time duties of American women have brought about the introduction of a number of service garments such as

Yeowomen's Suits
Red Cross Aprons
Munition Uniforms
Overalls
Garden Aprons

which show that the creative talent of American clothes designers is sufficiently flexible to adapt itself to the abnormal conditions of war. Patriotic American women can do no better service to their country than to lend their aid to the exploitation of American fashion designing, thereby stimulating the art development of our country.

Footwear

American Footwear is admittedly the best in the world, and the American manufacturers have long led all foreign competitors in the production of attractive, comfortable and durable shoes.

Our showing of "Made in U. S. A." footwear includes shoes from Philadelphia, Brooklyn, Newark and Cincinnati, made from many kinds of fabrics, as well as kids and leathers, the various fabric shoes being exceedingly popular not only for their own intrinsic worth but because their extensive use serves the patriotic purpose of releasing leather for military purposes.

Students, from Kindergarten and Grammar School Children to the High School and College Age, as Well as Their Parents and Teachers, Are Cordially Invited to See These Exhibits, Which Have Uncommon Educational Value.

KEITH'S BILL IS FULL OF GOOD ACTS

Trixie Friganza, after an absence of a few months, is back in Boston this week topping a sparkling show at Keith's. Trixie is her same old self and has a rapid-fire act full of new and some old gags, the latter she admits and is proud of.

She has with her Melissa Ten Eyck and Max Welly, who give a series of classic dances which of course allows Trixie an opportunity to burlesque them and end in a hoop skirt and pantalettes.

Another act on the bill which might be termed a headliner is Rita Marie and her company of eight attractive girls whose music is of a high order. A varied program is rendered by the girls allowing each one an opportunity to give a short turn on her particular instrument.

Other acts on the bill which deserve special mention are: Lillian Fitzgerald, the imitating comedienne, and Clarence Senna; Hugh Herbert, assisted by Sam Fries and company in "The Lemon"; Hart and Dymond, European society dancers; Michel and King, imitators of instruments and animals; "Blue" Hert Kenney; Joe Towle and Page and Hack and Mack.

WALDRON'S CASINO—Fred Irwin's Big Show, "Bill," with George Hayes and a company, including a number of attractive women, was put on at Waldron's Casino yesterday. The derivation of the name given by Leo McDonald, the author, was made clear to mystified patrons of the popular playhouse. "Bill" in no less than the more or less well known poet and playwright, Shakespeare, who has been resurrected and placed face to face with present theatrical conditions. Shakespeare's astonishment at the plight in which he finds the theatrical world should be seen rather than told. The women in the cast included Virginia Irwin, Adel Anderson, Hilda Bertin, Grace Estelle and Margaret Shane.

GAYETY THEATRE — The "Merry Rounders," the Max Spiegel production which has been so popular on the Columbia circuit, appeared at the Gayety yesterday. Featured in the production was Abe Reynolds, presenting his famous character, "Jacob Rosenbloom." In this character Reynolds portrays an amateur smuggler, and the comedy is furnished by complications arising from his attempt to smuggle a $20,000 necklace into the country. Playing opposite Reynolds was Florence Mills, with he most gorgeous wardrobe ever seen in burlesque. The chorus was up to the standard set by Spiegel, and was exceedingly well garbed.

Condensed Criticisms

BY THE DRAMATIC EDITOR.

Shubert Theatre—"So Long Letty," with Charlotte Greenwood, Walter Catlett and the original cast, is a lively and gingery musical conglomeration.

Wilbur Theatre—Last week of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, picture stars, in a taking drama full of fun and laughter, "Mary Her Darling."

Plymouth Theatre—"The Man Who Came Back" continues its brilliant and successful run.

Majestic Theatre—"Hearts of the World," the supreme work of D. W. Griffith, most wonderful of picture productions.

Copley Theatre—"Charley's Aunt," one of the best of the old-time comedies is continued by the Jewett Players.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE—Harold Woolf and Helen Stewart in the one-act comedy, "Twin Flats," headed an excellent bill at the new Codman Square Theatre in Dorchester yesterday. Others to be seen were Roy La Pearl in "A Vaudeville Surprise"; Helen Emilton trio, in an athletic act, and Vaughn and Dreams, two girls who are capable singers and dancers. On the screen there was shown the latest News Pictorial, and the photoplay, "The Risky Road," picturing Dorothy Phillips. The bill for the last half includes "The Melody Garden," a musical production, presented by a company of seven people, and on the screen Norma Talmadge, in "By Right of Purchase."

PARK THEATRE — Two extremely interesting photoplays were presented to Park Theatre audiences yesterday. They were "The Winning of Beatrice," featuring May Allison, and "The Seal of Silence," with Earl Williams. In "The Winning of Beatrice," Miss Allison played a girl whose ability to make home-made candies of unusual quality won her a fortune. The play dealt with a trade war between a big candy manufacturer and the Allison home made product. Earl Williams plays the part of the husband of a coldly selfish woman who scorns children and is a gambler. He is loved by another woman and the interest of the picture lies in the manner in which they are eventually united.

There was also a Sidney Drew comedy; Albertini, the baritone, and the Park Orchestra.

MODERN AND BEACON THEATRES —Madge Kennedy in her new photoplay, "The Fair Pretender," appeared in a thrilling drama, which will run throughout the week. As a stenographer, who by the acquisition of a rich wardrobe is led to pose as a society girl, Miss Kennedy is seen at her best. The manner in which she conquers an unforeseen dilemma holds the attention every moment. The companion picture, also shown for the first time, featured Kitty Gordon and Irving Cummings in "The Interloper." As the second wife of the son of a Southern family, Miss Gordon does particularly effective work in winning over her antagonistic relatives by marriage.

ST. JAMES THEATRE — Charles Ahern and company lead the vaudeville bill at Loew's St. James. This act includes the famous "tramp" characterization of Mr. Ahearn, together with a number of specialties by the company. Other acts include Walter Terrell and company in his new comedy, "This Way Out"; Dudley Douglas, in songs and comedy; Cunningham and Bennett in a singing act, and Mack and Faye, in dancing exhibitions. On the screen was shown the latest News Pictorial, a comedy, and the photoplay "Up the Road With Sally," featuring Constance Talmadge.

BOSTON THEATRE — Twin features headed the bill at the Boston yesterday. Anna Nilsson, Swedish film star, appeared in Rex Beach's newest photoplay, "Heart of the Sunset," and George Walsh was seen in the one-act vaudeville playlet, "Honors of Old Empires," by Marion Craig Wentworth, who wrote "War Brides," for Nazimova. The remainder of an excellent bill included Bennett's "Battle Royal"; Hilton and Rogers; Kitner, Hawksley and McClay, Red and Blondy, and others.

LANCASTER THEATRE — For the first time in Boston, the William Fox production "American Buds" pleturing Jane and Katherine Lee, the clever child players, was shown at the Lancaster yesterday. The picture is a lively comedy with a background of drama. A companion photoplay was "The Landlopper," with Harold Lockwood, while as an added attraction Charles Ray was seen in "Sudden Jim." The last half of the week Mary Pickford will be seen in her photoplay "Tess of the Tenements, "Amarilly of Clothes Line Alley."

ORPHEUM THEATRE—A May-time festival bill of vaudeville was offered at Loew's Orpheum yesterday, with three big headline acts. Mirolava and a quartet of Serbians presented a vocal and instrumental act, which was an artistic novelty. It included songs and music of the Serbians, who have been driven from their country by the Huns. Friend and Downing renewed their acquaintance with Bostonians in a lively line of comic chatter. Eddie Herron and company presented a one-act comedy, "After Three Weeks." On the screen were shown the latest News Pictorial, the latest Mack Sennett comedy, "Hattie Royal," and the photoplay, "The Mating of Marcella," picturing Dorothy Dalton.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE—Three headliners featured the bill at the Castle Square yesterday. In addition souvenirs were given out in the afternoon and evening. Douglas Fairbanks kept the audience in roars of laughter by his antics as "Mr. Fix-It." More laughs were scored by Charlie Chaplin in "The Adventurer," and Irene Castle gave a thrilling impersonation in "The Hillcrest Mystery."

COLUMBIA THEATRE—Billie Burke and Douglas Fairbanks were shown at the Columbia yesterday. Miss Burke appeared in an amusing picture entitled "Let's Get a Divorce," in which she was at her best. "Doug" romped in his own inimitable way through a series of laughable adventures, when as "Mr. Fix-It," he attempted to adjudicate others' troubles.

FENWAY THEATRE—Douglas Fairbanks led the bill at the Fenway in his new comedy, "Mr. Fix-It," one of the best pictures in which he has been seen. On the same bill was Florence Reed, who gave an effectively effective delineation of the dramatic art in "The Woman's Law." On the last three days of the week William S. Hart will be featured in "The Return of Draw Egan," and Hazel Marie Osborne in "Dolly Does Her Bit."

TREMONT TEMPLE—The fifth week of Ambassador James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" holds fair to break all records for attendance judging by yesterday's performances. This photoplay, which gives an insight into the real motives of the Germans for starting the war, is attracting many people who wish to learn for themselves the character of the Huns.

GLOBE THEATRE — Three male super-stars of the moving picture world feature the bill at the Globe Theatre this week. They are Charlie Chaplin in "Easy Street," William S. Hart in "The Apostle of Vengeance," and Douglas Fairbanks in "The Habit of Happiness." The three headliners, appearing on the same bill, are drawing capacity houses each day.

Coming Attractions

TREMONT THEATRE — The charming Mitzi and an unusually strong cast will open a Summer season at the Tremont next Saturday night, May 25, in "Head Over Heels." The book and lyrics are by Edgar Allen Woolf and the musical score by Jerome Kern, the musical comedy favorite composer. The supporting cast includes George Marion, Margaret Jarman, Boyd Marshall, Robert Emmett Keane, Charles C. Wilson, Thomas Walsh, Dorothy Mackaye and a well known troupe of acrobats. Producer Henry W. Savage lays first stress on the production as a play and secondly as a musical work.

Wilbur Theatre—On Monday night, May 27, a new comedy, "High and Dry," will follow Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew at the Wilbur. "High and Dry" is by Louis Ely, a St. Louis newspaperman, and is said to be one of the best productions of the Middle West that has been seen in years. The principal character is a young woman who runs a political gang, and eventually reforms and marries an editor who had been a tool of the bosses. There are many humorous sidelights. The producers, W. P. Orr and J. M. Welch, have chosen an excellent cast consisting of Edna Baker, who enacts the role of the heroine; Frank Sheridan, William T. Clarke and Esther Howard.

Copley Theatre—The Copley will present a new comedy during the week of May 27, entitled "Arms and the Girl," by Robert Baker. Its scenes are laid in Belgium during the first days of the German invasion, but the play is wholly a comedy.

Circus Comine—The delight of children and grownups, too, the great Barnum and Bailey Circus, with all its animals and thrills, will come in Boston during the week of May 27. As usual, the advance literature depicts the present circus as the "greatest show on earth" and the opinions of the spectators will no doubt corroborate the publicity men. The feature this year is the new Oriental pageant, "Aladdin and His Lamp."

TRY THIS FOR ECONOMY

"Conserving," "Economy" and "Thrift" are the present-day watchwords and well they may be! Are you conserving your health? Are you economical in buying treatment for disease? You should be! If your stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels and blood are not right in every sense, you should at once begin a treatment to restore good, healthy conditions. Sulphur, cream of tartar and herb extracts in a sugar-coated form, called Sulpherb Tablets is the surest relief that is economical. Get them in sealed tubes from druggists. Sulpherb is the name—not "sulphur." Mrs. J. J. Devlin, 518 W. 152nd St., New York City, writes: "I would also like to say I tried your Sulpherb Tablets O. K. and am very much pleased to recommend to all my friends, etc."—Advertisement.

Announcing the Liberal Policy "No-Extra-Charge"

Of the Boyle Bros.
Famous "Cash Store Price" System of Selling

Women's Clothing On Credit

For No Money Down and at the Cash Store Prices

$1.00 A WEEK

YOU can now buy Women's Coats, Suits and Dresses on credit in our own store, either with or without orders. We adopt this method of directly supplying our customers, as it saves them time and money, and is THE MOST SATISFACTORY WAY to them, as by selling our own clothing we are responsible for the quality of the goods.

Each year as greater sales volume has lowered our costs and increased our buying power, we have given our customers the benefit of our savings in the form of bigger values and closer prices.

It was EDWARDS' PROFIT-SHARING PLAN that created the Edwards' famous price range from $15 to $25 on Men's Clothes. Now we have added Women's Suits, Coats and Dresses to our store line, saving our customers ALL EXTRA CREDIT CHARGES—a MATERIAL BENEFIT PLAN conceded to our customers in the profits of Edwards' growth and expansion.

Edwards' "NO EXTRA CHARGE" policy shows that the new PROFIT-SHARING triumph of ours has electrified the whole credit trade.

It is not alone that the new policy means the SAVINGS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS to Edwards' Credit Buyers, but the saving comes at a time when all expected an actual rise in the price of clothes.

And now we inaugurate our greatest dividend sharing—a complete elimination of the so-called "extra charges," heretofore considered indispensable in the credit clothing business.

NANTASKET FARE UP TO MEET NEW CONDITIONS

"That we may be able to operate the steamers this coming Summer and meet the nearly 100 per cent. increase in wages it has become necessary for us to increase the far from twenty-five cents to thirty-five cents to Nantasket Beach," said Frederic L. Lane, general manager and treasurer of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company, today.

"On Friday, May 25, we have a change in schedule. Two more steamers will go in service. I do not know as yet whether I shall be able to coal or collect a crew for these boats, the labor situation being so acute.

"I have offered our equipment to the government, but have during the last week worked out a plan whereby we can still operate our regular business and keep one or two steamers at the disposal of the government whenever they call.

"It is only due to the fact that we are literally pushed to the wall by the tremendous advance in the cost of operation that we have that has forced this fare increase."

"Our steamers, which the government formerly permitted to carry 2,500 passengers, are now limited to 1,800, which, of course, cuts down our carrying capacity more than 25 per cent."

"This tariff increase does not affect the book tickets nor have the freight charges been changed."

BIG RED CROSS DISPLAY IN FILENE WINDOWS

As an incentive to Red Cross contributions, the Filene store today devoted all its ten windows on Summer street to Red Cross work. These windows, which will be shown on tomorrow also, include the execution of Edith Cavell, English nurse; the ruins of Ypres Cathedral; the interior of a French cathedral; the Greatest Mother of All, an enlargement with wax figures of the famous poster; windows showing surgical dressings, and a remarkable tableau entitled "The Spirit of the Red Cross."

MELROSE LOSES BOUT WITH THE COUNTY

Melrose today surrendered to the county of Middlesex and a bitter contest over the rights of the two is ended. As a result, Melrose will spend $500 widening a dangerous turn in Marvin road. The county commission notified the city if it failed to do the work, the county would do it and Melrose would pay the bill. So Melrose is going to do it.

How You Can Quickly Remove Hairy Growths

(Aids to Beauty)

A well known beauty specialist advises this treatment for the removal of hair from the face. Mix into a paste some powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This method is quick and entirely safe. To avoid disappointment, however, it is well to make certain you get genuine delatone.—Advertisement.

RUN DOWN PHONE CLEW IN GIRL'S TRAGIC FATE

Police Seek Name of Party on Line as Nellie Lipsett Fell Dead From Bullet

The police investigated today a telephone trail which formed a striking feature in the tragedy of Miss Nellie Lipsett, a nineteen-year-old girl, who was found dead by her sister, Miss Ruth Lipsett, in the apartment which the girls shared at No. 1722 Commonwealth avenue, Allston.

Nellie Lipsett had been shot through the right temple. Her body was on the bed. A revolver, with one cartridge discharged, was on the pillow, close to her head.

The telephone receiver was off the hook. The police report said that one of the dead girl's hands was still clutching the receiver when the tragedy was discovered by Miss Ruth Lipsett.

Another report stated that, while the receiver was off, the telephone was on a table some distance from the bed, and that the receiver was not held in the girl's hand.

SUICIDE, SAYS EXAMINER.

The fact that both reports agree that the telephone line was open when the body was found has raised the question whether the person with whom Miss Lipsett had been talking could have heard the shot which ended Miss Lipsett's life.

Medical Examiner George B. Magrath gave a preliminary opinion that the case was presumably one of suicide. But he arranged to perform an autopsy at the Northern Mortuary today.

Dr. Magrath also planned to ask the telephone company to follow up the telephone connection and to ascertain whether Miss Lipsett had called or whether some one had called her and how long the receiver had been off the hook.

The tragedy was discovered when Miss Ruth Lipsett returned from her work in a Congress street office. It was learned that Nellie Lipsett had talked with a relative over her telephone at 2 p. m. A brother-in-law of the sisters, a Mr. McAlman, declined to state the name of this relative.

The police believe that Nellie Lipsett talked later with another person, following her telephone talk with this relative, and that the shooting took place soon after or at the time of this second talk.

It was said today that the sisters had planned to accompany two young men last night to some social affair or entertainment. Inquiry is being made as to the identity of these young men.

Miss Ruth Lipsett said that, when she left home yesterday morning, her sister seemed in her usual good spirits.

The Lipsett sisters came to Boston about two months ago from their home in Fredricton, N. B. Their family is said to be well-to-do. While the elder sister, Ruth, does clerical work, it is said that she does so more to keep herself occupied in these war times than from actual necessity.

Neighbors said today that Ruth drove an automobile, keeping the machine in a nearby garage.

500 YALE MEN RIOT; 10 TAKEN IN UNIFORM

By International News Service.

New Haven, May 21.—Ten Yale students in artillery and naval uniforms were arraigned in the police court here today charged with breach of the peace as a result of a riot participated in by about 500 Yale undergraduates late last night.

The trouble originated on the campus of Sheffield Scientific School, where someone fired several shots from a revolver into the air. A crowd of students soon collected and in increasing numbers marched toward the campus, where they were joined by several hundred who ran from the dormitories.

The student mob charged through the centre of the city, hindering traffic, taking signs from trolley cars, interfering with automobiles and pedestrians and defying the attempts of the police to disperse them.

Marching up Church street, the rioting students swarmed into the yard, ripping up benches and placing them in the middle of the street near the City Hall. The racket attracted the attention of Mayor David E. Fitzgerald. He went out, but was defied by the students.

One of the offenders who is alleged to have insulted the mayor was arrested. The mayor made a speech urging the students to disperse after they had stolen his automobile and blockaded the streets.

The crowd finally started for the campus, prodded by the policemen, who finally landed ten in the lock-up.

$4,735 TO TWO WOMEN RUN DOWN BY AUTO

Three verdicts, totalling $4,735, were returned against the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company by a jury before Judge Brown in the first session of the Superior Civil Court at East Cambridge. Annie C. Washburn of Melrose, who sued for $5,000, was given $3,500, and Mrs. Clara C. Rockwell of Melrose, who sued for $5,000, was given $1,200. They were walking on the sidewalk near the corner of Main and East Emerson streets, in Melrose, on May 14, 1917, when an automobile owned by the company came up onto the sidewalk and knocked them down. Jasper C. Rockwell sued for $2,000 for the loss of his wife's services and medical expenses. He was given $35.

FIREWORKS FORBIDDEN JUNE 17 AND JULY 4

An order forbidding the sale and use of fireworks on Bunker Hill Day and the Fourth of July was issued today by Fire Prevention Commissioner Frank Lewis.

The order forbids that "old-fashioned" celebration of the two patriotic holidays. It applies to the city of Boston and the Metropolitan District, but the example is expected to be followed by the officials of practically every city and town in the Commonwealth.

One of the interesting reasons stated by Commissioner Lewis for his decision is that the use of fireworks "would also furnish opportunity to alien enemies to cause explosions."

GERMAN BRIBER IS UNMASKED IN VIENNA

Berlin Agent Offered to Make Good Card Loss for Treason of Count's Secretary

By International News Service.

Paris, May 21.—Travelers just arriving in Switzerland from Budapest, says the Matin, relate a story which caused an enormous sensation in Austria.

A Hungarian by the name of Dobay, secretary to the famous Hungarian statesman, Count Karolyi, lost a large sum of money at cards. He was approached by Vount von Flotow, German military attache at Vienna, who offered him 20,000 kronen for possession of Count Karolyi's confidential notes on France in order to compromise him.

Dobay informed a friend, Paul Kery, of the offer and the friend advised him to accept in the interests of Austria. Dobay then told Flotow that the price was too low, demanding more for an accomplice. The attache then offered fifty thousand kronen, but still Dobay was not satisfied.

Dobay was frequently in touch with Von Flotow by telephone, first arranging that the conversations should be overheard by a representative of the government.

Finally Von Flotow offered 260,000 kronen for the immediate theft of the documents. Dobay and Kery wrote to Count Karolyi exposing the German attache.

At a later sitting of the Chamber there were interpellations on the matter, but the actions of Dr. Wekerle, the Hungarian premier, caused him to become very unpopular. Wekerle promised to investigate and protest to Germany.

The German consul and Count von Flotow are expected to resign.

The censors allowed no allusion to be made of the affair in the press of the central powers.

Count Karolyi has been working for peace and recently went to Switzerland on a peace mission.

BARROW UP IN AIR FOR NEW MEN

Sox Manager Says Ruth Illness Will Not Shift Campaign, but Is After Players

By NICK FLATLEY.

"The loss of Ruth for a few days will not affect our plan of campaign."

So declared Manager Edward Barrow of the flying Red Sox this rather gloomy day.

"His batting will be missed of course, and so will his pitching, but it's all in the game. I will use Leonard, then Bush will have a turn and yet come back maybe, with Carl Mays. Or before that time perhaps I'll have a trade put through."

There is no immediate trade in prospect, the director of things admitted, but he's trying all the time to get some reserve strength to bolster up his regulars.

Many are inclined to see in the temporary indisposition of Ruth, the break that may knock the Sox out of their well deserved present place in the sun. But not Manager Barrow. He believes that if it comes to a showdown he can get along with three good pitchers. Just as his friend George T. Stallings did a few years back.

NOTHING IN BEAN BALL HINT.

Barrow merely laughs at the so-called bean ball incident between Mays and Speaker.

"Any pitcher is likely to cut loose a wild one," he explained. "There was no deliberate attempt at beaning. Speaker was convinced of that fact Cobb stands to reason, doesn't it, that if Mays wanted to hit a man he'd shoot a fast one at him, and not a curve. It was a curve that hit Spoke."

Old Phan Gives Some of His Own Ideas Regarding the Bean Ball

Boston, Mass., May 21.

Feelder Jones, manerger, St. Louis, Washintun, D. C.

Deer Feelder:—Say, lissen, you remember that time we was up to your Red socks pitchers were usin' that bean ball.

You no, Feelder, wen you sent that guy Hartley up their in the nineth, an' maid him hit wen, we was 2 out, an' 3 balls, an' this guy leonerd had one of them no hitters all wun.

Yu sed then, Feelder, they was usin' it, an' now I guess you gotta cupple of more votes.

BRAVES OUT TO TURN TABLES ON REDS

Loss of Opening Game to Matty's Pennant Chasers Speeds Up Boston Boys

Cincinnati, May 21.—Erase one inning, the fifth, and Don Carlos Pat Ragan, Braves' Hispano-Hibernian box artist, twirled well enough to defeat Fred Toney and the Reds.

However, the fifth stands as played. In that session Mathewson's pennant-chasers chased four runs over the saucer, which had a whole lot to do in making the final tally 3-2.

Toney has not lost a game since he came out of retirement, some three weeks ago. This time he turned in his customary gilt-edge slab performance and likewise swung the bludgeon a la Eddie Heath. Sherwood Magee, Tyrus Cobb and those other eminent big-ie manufacturers.

Red Smith kept up his sensational hitting for the Braves, playing practically a lone hand in an offensive way for his side. Up four times, the sun-crowned Georgian pasted out three clean ones. One of his wallops netted him two bases.

The fans "rode" Herzog all afternoon. Back got it far worse than he did when he played on the Polo Grounds, New York, last month. He formerly managed the Reds and really laid the foundation for this winner of Matheson's. But somehow or other he's a member of the In-Bad Club.

A big crowd saw the matinee and the chances are Stallings will take some money away with him, even if he doesn't tote off many victories. Still, his club looked good yesterday and there would have been a different story to tell if Ragan had not gone balooning in the fifth session.

FRITZ O'MARRA CALLED; FORD TO PILOT TUFTS

Horace Ford of Somerville has been elected captain of the Tufts baseball team to succeed Fritz O'Marra, who has been called to report at the Engineers' Training Camp at Philadelphia. Ford, the only remaining junior on the nine, was the unanimous choice of his mates for the position. He will also act as coach the remainder of the season, as Wallie Walsh has gone into the service.

Ford has been playing short on the Medford machine the past two seasons. He received his preliminary training in baseball when attending at Somerville High.

FREBURG CONFIDENT HE WILL PUZZLE ZBYSZKO

Wladek Zbyszko, Polish wrestling star, is doomed to defeat if John Freburg has the right combination of holds when they meet in the Grand Opera House Thursday night.

Joe Coffey, Chicago promoter, who manages Freburg, writes that the latter has some new grips which he intends to use on the Pole and considers by saying that he is certain that his charge will either come home a winner or give Zbyszko one of the greatest battles he has had in years.

Freburg was due in the Hub today. He will do only light work until called to the mat.

NOBLE & GREENOUGH TO RACE ALL-STAR EIGHT

Noble & Greenough and an all-star eight, representing the Intercollegiate Rowing Association, will clash in a one-mile race for the Yale Challenge Cup in the feature event of the Harvard school regatta, on the Charles River, Saturday.

Coaches Ellery Browne & Nicholls, Cambridge Latin and Rindge Technical four-oared crews are to meet in a triangular race on the Charles.

BINDING TIE TOO FAST FOR FIELD IN FEATURE

Louisville, May 21.—The Juvenile Stakes fell to E. R. Bradley's Binding Tie, coupled in the mutuels with Brother MacGuan. Legal noised out Sennings Park for second place.

Binding Tie was the only favorite to win. The big upset came in the fourth race when Fern Handley easily outran Rabo, odds-on favorite. Jockeys Gruber and Hoag each drew three days' suspension for disobedience at the barrier.

YALE OARSMEN UNDER CARE OF RIVALS

Freshmen and Second Crews Coming Here Thursday for Races on Saturday

The Yale freshman and second university crews will reach Boston Thursday night, where they will be taken in charge by Manager Andrew F. Tribble of the Harvard Rowing Association. Both will oppose Crimson eights in Saturday's Spring regatta on the Charles.

The visiting Elis will be the guests of their Harvard rivals. The second crew will be put up at Cleverly Hall and take their meals at the Iroquois Club. The freshmen will be located at the 1921 dormitories, where they will also have a private table.

Both crews will out on the river Friday forenoon and have several chances to try out their newly rigged shell before the races Saturday. The craft was rigged this week with thole pins, one of Harvard's ward boats being used for that purpose.

Among the numbers booked for the regatta will be a race between the university oarsmen rowing in pair-oared shells. The winning pair will each receive a medal.

George Krogness, Harvard's freshman track captain and the mainstay of the team, is suffering from a slight stone bruise, which is not expected to prevent him from taking part in Saturday's meet at New Haven.

John Fenno, one of the freshman tennis players, is also hurt similarly, but he, too, expects to oppose the Yale racquet wielders this week end at Killtown.

RESTA-DE PALMA ON SCRATCH IN FUTURITY

New York, May 21.—A second feature, to be known as the Futurity Handicap, has been added to the Memorial Day program of automobile races to be held at Sheepshead Bay Speedway. The Futurity will precede the Harkness Handicap, the principal event of the afternoon, and will be run in two ten-mile heats and a final.

Practically all of the daring pilots who are to compete in the Harkness Handicap will clash in the Futurity. Dario Resta and Ralph de Palma have been placed at scratch for the shorter race, the Harkness Handicap at a 100 miles.

Nearly all of the drivers who are to compete in these two events will be on the track at the Speedway today, beginning their final preparations for the races.

TRIPLE A PUTS ON ALL-STAR BOXING CARD

By J. P. MURPHY.

Shifting from its usual policy, and with the hope of changing its luck, the Armory A. A. will present an all-star show at the Arena tonight. The bill consists of three ten-round bouts and an eight-round curtain-raiser.

It is the earnest hope of the Triple-A directors that the entertainment proves a worthy introductory to a series of four feature attractions, which are scheduled to follow on the four forthcoming Tuesday nights.

Tonight's program is one of the best cards arranged by the Triple-A in some time, and unless we miss our guess, should be crowded with action from beginning to end.

Terry Brooks of West End and Pete Hartley, New York's Durable Dane, are underlined to furnish the mulling in the final ten-rounder.

The semi-final brings together Johnny Buckley of South Boston and Tommy Eles of Paterson, N. J., combatants in a rugged set-to at the Arena last Tuesday night. They are to make 129 pounds ringside.

Larry Harms of South Boston and Packey Hommey of New York will clash in the third ten-rounder, while the opening skirmish, at eight rounds, is to be between Joe Rivera of Gloucester and Panama Joe Gans.

GOSSIP OF GLOVELAND

FRANKIE (YOUNG) BRITT, New Bedford miller, has again parted company with Bay Cave, this time for good, he claims the AMERICAN. Britt's pugilistic affairs will hereafter be taken care of by Joe Rose, his brother-in-law.

* * *

BRITT MAKES his first appearance under Rose' management tonight, when he tackles Joe Mooney of New York in the principal set-to at the Waiting City A. C., New Bedford.

* * *

JOHNNY BURNS, matchmaker of the Cambria A. C., Philadelphia, and manager of Gussie Lewis, is anxious to line up his proteges with Britt. He names 126 pounds ringside as the desired figure.

* * *

DICK LOADMAN, scrappy little towhead from Lockport, N. Y., is claiming the world's featherweight championship as a result of his quick victory over Johnny Ertle, St. Paul battler, whom he stopped in three rounds at Milwaukee.

* * *

"LOADMAN," WRITES Hugh Shannon, his pilot, "is anxious to clear up the muddle in the featherweight class. Some critics recognize Pete Herman as champion, while others declare for Loadman since the latter knocked out Ertle.

"NOW IF Pete wants to settle this little controversy," continues Shannon, "we are willing to oblige him with a twenty-round bout to a referee's decision. Meanwhile Loadman will battle all comers.

MATCHMAKER BOB McKIRDY of the Commercial A. C. today completed his card for Friday night by arranging two snappy preliminaries. The six will bring together Mike Castle of Lawrence and Freddie Webb of Weymouth, in the other Charlie (Chief) Miller of the South End meets Battling Morris

Corbett's Corner

By JAMES J. CORBETT.

The approach of the Summer season makes extra precautions necessary to the care of the health.

"Keep cool" is ever a Summer slogan.

"How shall I do it?" is humanity's cry.

Keeping cool during the hottest days of the Summer can be accomplished by a rigid adherence to a few simple rules. The most important of all is: Don't overeat. Food means fuel for the body. The more you eat the more internal heat is generated.

The human body can get along very nicely with at least 60 per cent. of the food that most of us now take into the stomach. And in the summertime if the daily rations are only one-half of those that are customary during the Winter nearly all of us would be in much better health.

Avoid sugary, starchy and fatty foods during the Summer if you wish to keep cool and reduce to a minimum the possibility of sunstroke or heat prostration.

By fatty, sugary and starchy foods is meant such things as meats, oily fish, potatoes, beans, carrots, peas, oatmeal, tapioca, wheat bread, cheese, cream, etc. Each is high in calories which create the heat within the body.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

You can get along during the Summer by adhering largely to a diet which consists of fresh vegetables and fruits, plenty of nonoily fish and occasionally some eggs.

Of course(I am not advocating that one should entirely drop potatoes, meats, etc., from the menu. But I do feel that meat about four times a week during the Summer is sufficient for anyone.

If not partaken ofisner during the Summer it means a splendid improvement in the health.

Frequent bathing is to be recommended. A daily bath in Summer—preferably in the morning—is of prime importance. If you haven't a shower or a tub in which you can take a bath, fill a basin full of water and sponge the body.

OPEN AIR AND EXERCISING.

The drinking of generous quantities of water during the Summer is to be recommended. But don't drink any liquid while in an overheated condition. As a thirst quencher add the juice of half a lemon to a glass of water.

Get out into the open air as much as possible, but don't brave the rays of the sun during the hottest portions of the day. Sunshine is nature's own remedy and a splendid tonic, but there are certain times—around noon and early in the afternoon—when it shines down with an intensity that is a little too great for some humans to withstand.

In conclusion I reiterate the advice for Summer:

(1) Don't overeat.
(2) Keep the intestines clear.
(3) Bathe daily.
(4) Exercise daily.

TRIS SPEAKER FALLS OUT OF BIG THREE; RED SMITH GOING UP

TRIS SPEAKER, for the first time since the season opened, fell below third place in the American League batting averages, both George Burns and Tillie Walker of the Athletics passing him.

Babe Ruth and Frits Maisel, both of whom are on the sick list, are leading. The three leaders:

Player.	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Ruth, Boston	83	32	.407
Maisel, St. Louis	34	12	.387
Harper, Phila.	107	39	.364

RED SMITH BANG-UP SECOND.

The heavy batting of Red Smith of the Braves has brought him within two points of the high water mark in the National League, set by the veteran, Larry Doyle. The big three:

Player.	A.B.	H.	P.C.
Doyle, New York	54	23	.426
Smith, Boston	109	42	.424
Smyth, St. Louis	51	20	.392

Rumor That Kauff May Be Called to Army Soon

New York, May 21.—A rumor of unknown origin in baseball circles here today to the effect that Benny Kauff may be ordered to report for duty in the National Army within two or three weeks is furnishing Giant fans with plenty of fodder for speculation.

On account of the smart hitting, flashy fielding and daring baserunning of the little Ohioan, his shoes would be hard to fill. Kauff is in class 1, and it is considered a certainty that he will be called.

Kauff's absence would leave a wide gap in both the offensive and defensive playing of the National League champions.

LEWIS BLINDED BY SHUBERT'S FAST WORK

Al Shubert of New Bedford proved entirely too clever and aggressive for Gussie Lewis, loudly touted Philadelphia featherweight, in the feature set-to at the Douglas A. C., Chelsea, and rightfully gained Referee Jack Moore's award at the conclusion of their twelve-round encounter.

Lewis put up a good battle, scoring successfully by means of a stiff right hand uppercut, but Shubert's boring-in style finally told on him and he tired badly toward the end.

Shubert fought like a little major from the start to the finish, never once letting up. While most of his attack was directed at Lewis' body, on many occasions he crossed both right and left to the face with telling effect.

Walter Bartlett of Lawrence outclassed Young Alger, so-called Greek champion, in the semi-final, which ended at the close of the sixth round when the latter's seconds very sensibly threw the sponge into the ring.

Kid Lee bested Johnny Gray in the six-round curtain-raiser, Sailor Bruno of Commonwealth Pier drew with Billy Sullivan of Salem in another mill at the same distance.

Members of the club contributed $66.62 toward the Red Cross Fund.

Hon. Babe Ruth Is Feeling O. K., But Cannot Go Out

Babe Ruth, million-dollar pitching and swatting star of the Red Sox, was reported resting comfortably today, and in no danger of suffering any lasting results from his startling collapse.

His malady is acute oedema of the laryngeal nerve, while Battering Babe is as happy as ever, he can scarcely talk. It is not thought he will be able to resume his duties at the Fenway before the middle of next week; in fact, the big fellow may have to miss the rest of the battles with the Westerners.

Barrow admits it will be Leonard today, Bush tomorrow and Mays again Thursday. He won't be a bit peeved if a rainy day sneaks in. However, he doesn't seem a bit anxious to call on his second-string men, even if the Big Four is shy just about its most important member.

THIS is the anniversary of the opening of the Manchester Ship Canal in 1894. It is thirty-five miles in length, cost about $70,000,000. It has a swing aqueduct, the first of its kind in the world. The canal has added greatly to the prosperity of Manchester.

Thinning Out Your Plants

GARDENERS should thin their plants to these distances: Carrots, 2 inches; endive, 8 inches; kale, 6 inches; lettuce, 8 inches; parsley, 4 inches; radish, 2 inches; spinach, 3 inches; turnips, 3 inches; beet, 4 inches; parsnip, 3 inches; onions, 3 inches.

Women in War Work

HOW THEY MAY FIND EMPLOYMENT

But if They Already Hold Other Good Positions, Miss Ellam Advises Them to Stick

By Elizabeth Ellam

SEVERAL letters have reached my desk, written by women who are already employed, but who are obsessed with the idea that war work is the only work to be done. Women are rushing to employment bureaus, seeking positions in machine shops and munitions factories, while acknowledging at the same time that they have positions paying a fair wage and that they know nothing whatever about the work that they propose to go into.

To these women I would say—don't! If you are employed, if you are making a fair wage, stay where you are. Work harder, give double the effort you are giving now in the place where you are and speed up, all around. Do not clutter up the labor situation and throw everything into confusion by forsaking that employment for a new and untried field.

As Much Patriotism.

There is just as much patriotism today in working to the fullest extent of your capabilities, speeding up your energies to their utmost, and doing double if you can what you have done before, as there is in rushing to a munitions factory and spending weeks and months in learning a new job. By doing your work as well as you can, you may release a man who can thereby go into government service.

A letter which has just reached me brought this to my mind. The woman, by her own statement, is at present engaged in designing and making women's garments. It is a field in which she must be proficient else she would not have risen to the responsible position of designer. Yet this woman wants to know something of machine shops, where they are in Boston and what the wage is. Her letter has been answered personally, but it is my hope that she will stay where she is.

Women will undoubtedly continue to wear garments. Let her bend every energy to designing the most comfortable garments that they have ever worn, the most attractive and the most cheerful. For in war times we need comfort and beauty and cheer as we have never needed them before. Instead of contributing her bit in a hot, greasy, oily machine shop, let her do it making the rest of the feminine world as comfortable that they will all become more efficient at their own war tasks.

In a complicated machine there are always hundreds of tiny bolts, pins and screws, all most essential to the perfect efficiency of the machine. If one breaks or gives out the work is hindered and perhaps stops altogether until repairs are made. There are hundreds of us who are just the "pins" in the big machine, but by keeping in perfect condition, doing the work as well as we can, we can all help instead of hindering.

Dear Miss Ellam:

I am anxious to know something about war work and its possibilities. I believe, in an article on women in war industry, you referred to radio operators, to yeowomen and said something about opportunities for learning telegraphy. Will you be good enough to tell me something of these opportunities, and how I can avail myself of any of them. I am anxious to do something.

Swampscott. MARION S.

I am sorry to be obliged to tell you that the Eastern Radio Institute, which has previously trained women as radio operators for the Special Aid Society, is devoting its attention exclusively to men at present. If you will apply to the Charlestown Navy Yard, you will learn of the opportunities for yeowomen, their qualifications and the wage.

Apply at No. 149 Congress street for information regarding the Western Union school for telegraphers.

Become a Nurse

My Dear Miss Ellam:

Will you give me some suggestions as to work that I may train for, that will be of genuine service to the country? I am twenty-three years old, and have never worked. I do not feel that I especially want to go into a machine shop or a munitions factory—yet there must be some place in which I could find useful work to do. EDITH J. W.

Weymouth.

I can think of no way in which a girl of your age can prove her patriotism more, or be of more service, than to enter a training school for nurses. By that I am not referring to training for overseas service. So many of our trained nurses are going that there is to be a great dearth of nurses at home in a few years more. The Massachusetts General Hospital has an excellent training school, or you may apply to the National Red Cross at Washington, for full information, stating what you want. A list of hospital training schools in your vicinity will be sent you.

Motherhood an Inspiration to a Career

Mrs. Charles de Loosey Oelrichs, Noted Suffrage Leader, Has Time for Her Work and Her Little Girl, Too

By Margery Rex

THE old fiction that motherhood is a hindrance to a career is being discredited more and more every day. Some of the cleverest women of the time, in all walks of life, are proud to declare that children give to them an inspiration unknown in their unmarried days.

Among these is Mrs. Charles de Loosey Oelrichs, of New York and Newport, whose work in the cause of suffrage has won her a nation-wide recognition.

Her original efficient work in war relief activities and unselfish effort in the work of the Red Cross entitle her to rank prominently among the women of high social position, beauty and wealth who prefer to give their time to the useful things of life rather than the butterfly atmosphere. Not only has she earned the right to be considered a useful woman, but she has a leading place in tasks designed to benefit and uplift the unfortunate.

Mrs. Oelrichs, who was Miss Marjory Turnbull, has an ample fortune of her own. Her husband is wealthy and prominent. Her beauty has called forth the encomiums of famous artists and sculptors. Her simplicity and charm of manner have made her a favorite in the young married set.

Mrs. Oelrichs has been a constant worker for the Duryea War Relief and has taken a leading part in caring for the refugee children of the stricken countries abroad. Her little daughter has been doing her part by making gun-wipers for the soldiers. Little Miss Oelrichs and her friends have formed an organization which is devoted entirely to this purpose.

The Oelrichs family is known socially and financially from coast to coast and on the Continent. They maintain homes in New York, Newport, Palm Beach, and in each of these places Mrs. Oelrichs' activities have been notable. She has done important work for the relief of the poor wherever the social setting for the time held her family.

She Wasn't Handsome

AND SHE DIDN'T HAVE A FINE FIGURE

But, to the Surprise of Her Friends, She Made Herself Adored Wherever She Went

By Beatrice Fairfax

WE were discussing the widow of the other day and the amazing success she has made of her life. We had all been schoolmates of hers, and we remembered her as a homely little girl inclined to fatness and tears. This was way back in the fourth and fifth grades, and that picture persisted—a tearful little girl consoling herself with a surreptitious peppermint.

Never an attractive child, she developed into rather a peevish girl who always had a woe or two on hand that she was more than ready to tell you about. She seemed chronically in need of sympathy, and she absorbed it as a blotting paper absorbs ink.

We were surprised—in the unfaltering way of classmates—when she married a young army officer and went to live in the Philippines.

None of us ever knew what happened in the islands. Perhaps one fine morning she met a long-lost fairy godmother who confided to her the secret of "charm;" perhaps, like Aladdin, she found an old lamp that worked miracles, or may be she just schemed out the whole thing by herself.

At any rate, rumors began to fly homeward that Louise—we'll call her that—was the most fascinating woman in Manila. "She's got 'em all on the string," the reporting friend confided; and by "'em" she meant everything in a uniform, from young and slender second lieutenants to pompous colonels of long and slender—and we who had been to school with her found it hard to believe.

Then we heard she had been left a widow and had gone to China, where she had a brother in the consular service. And the China bulletins equalled those from the Philippines—Louise carried everything before her. She was like a racing yacht full on a winning breeze.

No Unpleasant Gossip

The sole difference between Louise and other women who make "charm" a business was that there were no unpleasant stories in her wake. No broken home wreckage, no especially scandalous gossip, nothing unpleasant. And the former classmate jury sat on her case every time it met. It could understand, still remembering the fat little girl eating peppermint on the sly.

Finally she came home, and we nearly broke our necks in the haste we made to call on the "siren." Had the dumpy girl been turned into a daughter of the gods—"divinely tall and most divinely fair"? I think, despite our impressions, we went expecting to find a triumph of the "beauty parlor." And a clever "stage manager," too; a woman who would understand clothes and background effects and rose-colored curtains.

But, bless you, no; we found Louise still rather inclined to be dumpy and not at all good-looking. And as for "effects," the afternoon she was sitting somewhat dumpily on the table at which she was pouring tea.

But she had entirely given up the tears of childhood and the thirst for sympathy of early youth. She was cheerful, and she remembered the most charming things of all of us. She remembered all our good points, too—which had the beautiful complexion, which the curly hair, which played well enough to adorn the concert stage, and very delicately she insinuated each had kept these charms.

There was nothing suggestive of trowel work about her way of using gracious things. It was all as delicate as an old pastel drawing. We may have had our own misgivings, but it was highly gratifying and agreeable.

On Good Terms With Self

There was nothing as gross as flattery about her methods, a fine appreciation more nearly conveyed the effect it produced. And the rather hostile schoolmate jury began to beam as it realized what a success it had made of life.

While we were there several men called—men who had known her in the Philippines and now on their way to France. She didn't have to ask anyone here if he liked his wife as she remembered. Again I heard her convey to each, when he was out of hearing of the others, that she looked to him, personally, to save civilization.

She hoped Colonel Smith would have time for just a round of golf before he sailed—no?—too bad!—he played such a wonderful game. She recalled Mrs. Smith's "inspired" bridge. She asked for, by name, all someone's children. She was reminiscent over a poodle, in Manila, named "Dixie," and the mistress of the deceased dog recalled his most beguiling tricks.

Mrs. Smith, who had played the "inspired" bridge, began her to "save August" for her—she had taken a cottage at the North Shore. Someone else entreated her to go on a motoring trip, and a camp in the Adirondacks would be a rank failure without her presence. The Summer would be a very economical season for our old schoolmate, we decided.

My conclusion in regard to her was that she was life in the terms of a salad, and that her recipe called for more oil, and then some more. If there was any vinegar added to her famous dressing, no one could detect it. Oil, oil, oil—until all the human ingredients that she manipulated at her pleasure fairly glided without a hint of friction. Louise was a wonderful salad dresser, of that there could be no doubt.

We noticed that she accepted none of the invitations for the Summer, and that her eye rested favorably on a certain very eligible man, some eight or ten years younger than she was. Could it be possible that she was going to marry him? Before our call was over it was made plain to us, by the happy man, that this was so.

Icelandic Mothers Working for the War

Here in the United State there are Icelandic women who are doing war work, for they owe allegience to the flag and have members of their families in the American Army. In a recent letter Mrs. B. B. Gislason, chairman of the Minnesota Division of the Women's Committee, Council of National Defence, describes a meeting at which forty-five women were present.

"Because some of the older members can not speak English, the program was mainly in Icelandic," Mrs. Gislason says. "You would not have understood much of what was said, but you would have understood and appreciated the music of the knitting needles. Almost every woman had her knitting, and how the needles did fly! The war is uppermost in the hearts of these women, for they have twelve boys in the service. The music of the knitting needles will follow those dear boys across the ocean and help them fight for the good of their beloved America."

"No, I don't," Dora agreed. "I used to think that I cared enough about him to marry him—but now I know I don't. Something—I can't tell you what it is—has changed my whole viewpoint. I have put it from me, and laughed at it, and mocked at it—and now it has turned upon me and torn me to pieces. Oh, Cyn—what shall I do?"

"Tell Milton the truth, Dora. That is the honest and fair thing. You would do him a foul injustice if you were to marry him without loving him. Why, Dora—it would be a sin.

"How do you know?" Dora demanded. "You love Gerard—and no wonder—but if you did not, would you tell him you did not?"

There was a long silence. Then Cynthia spoke.

"Dora—I would have to. If a man married a woman without loving me I would never forgive him."

Dora's hand sought hers in the dark and gripped it tightly. "Do you mean that, Cyn?"

"I mean just that, Dora," Cynthia insisted.

"But if a man broke off his engagement to you because he did not love you, would you not hate and despise him?"

"Not if he told me the truth," Cynthia replied. "If I were very much in love with him it would hurt. But it would not ruin my life as it would were I to marry him without loving him."

And silence, broken at last by Dora.

"I have made up my mind," she said in a low voice, "to tell Milton the whole truth. And, Cynthia, do you know, I don't believe it's going to hurt him much. I—I—well, I have seen men in love—and Milton was never like that.

"No," after a few minutes of thought, "I am sure it will not hurt him. But—" with a sudden catching of her breath—"think of what father and mother will say! They will be furious. I feel as if I were a little girl who had disobeyed my parents and must take my punishment, not as if I were free and twenty-one. Oh, Cyn, I am frightened. They have set their hearts upon my marriage to Milton, and the invitations for a double wedding are all engraved—and everything!"

Before Cynthia could speak there was a knock at the door.

"If you please, Miss Cynthia," Marie was saying, "Mr. Stewart's calling."

NO DEMAND FOR RUBBER SHOES

In the coast section of Peru there is no demand for rubber overshoes because of the absence of rain. There is a moderate sale for them in the mining towns. The average Peruvian prefers heavy-soled shoes to rubbers. The retail price of men's rubbers is $2 a pair in Arequipa; women's rubbers sell for $1.99.

Their Married Life

A Narrative of Everyday Affairs

Copyright, 1918, by International News Service.

"ARENT you ready yet?"

Helen, who was vainly trying to hurry, in the midst of dressing suddenly broke her shoestring.

"Oh, dear!"

"What's the matter now?" asked Warren, coming in. "Good Heavens, what have you been doing since I was here last time? You were dressed that far long ago."

"My shoestring just broke and I haven't another pair."

"What's the matter with your low shoes? Now that it's the weather for low shoes you're wearing high ones. You women are certainly the limit."

"My low shoes are at the repair shop."

Have you only one pair?"

Helen turned from the glass determinedly. "Now, see here, Warren, if you're going to cross-examine me this way, I'll never be ready."

"Oh, all right; but we'll be so late that there won't be any use of going at all." And Warren stamped out.

Helen proceded to dress. She got out her second best pumps and slipped them on with a rueful look at her feet which she liked to see at their best when she went out anywhere, and then she went to the closet for her taffeta dress. It hung on the hanger fresh from the cleaner's and Helen shook it out lightly and slipped it over her head. Half the hooks and eyes were off, but with a reckless disregard for how things looked underneath, Helen stuck pins in wherever they were needed. At last she was ready she thought with a sigh of relief as she viewed herself in the mirror. No, what was that? As she lifted her arm a space of white flesh showed alarmingly.

"The sleeve is torn out," she gasped aloud, a sob in her throat. Then, as she began to get out of the dress the tears of nervousness began to rush down her face.

"Warren," she called, going to the door, "I've just discovered that my dress is torn. You'll have to go on without me, or we'll have to stay home."

"What on earth have you been doing all day? Why couldn't you have discovered these things earlier?" snapped Warren. "I'm sure I don't know what you do with your time. I always have to wait around for you every time we go anywhere. No system; no order about anything in this house."

"What are we going to do about it?" said Helen. In the midst of her nervousness she could still afford to ignore the unfair attitude that Warren chose to assume and look to the excuse that would have to be made to the Daltons. To call off an engagement at the last moment like this was unpardonable, but not half so much so as it would be to keep a dinner waiting while she mended the dress or stopped to get another one ready.

Warren was already at the telephone explaining and apologizing, while Helen on the other side of the door listened to the polite falsehoods. The slamming down of the receiver sent her back to the dressing table, and the next minute Warren strode into the room, took off his coat and threw it across the bed and got into his smoking jacket.

"Don't ever make another dinner engagement for me," he growled just before he left. "When you can get your clothes ready a day in advance, so that we can keep an appointment, let me know."

Helen slipped into a kimono and sat down by the window to let her nerves calm down. The evening breeze swept in and ruffled the curtains. Everything was strangely quiet, and a feeling of peace began to settle down over Helen's heart. Her mind began to run over the occurrences of the evening. In a sense Warren had been right about not letting things go till the last minute. She began to see things from his angle.

No wonder he was cross, expecting to go out to dinner and then having to break the engagement because of her tardiness. What a dear he had been, too, to take the entire thing on his own shoulders and to tell Mrs. Dalton that a nervous headache had prostrated Helen at the last minute. What had made her think he was unjust? Too often things happened through her own carelessness, and without stopping to reason she blamed Warren and nursed a secret grief down deep in her heart.

With a sudden resolution she stole out into the living-room and dropped down beside Warren where he was seated reading the paper.

"Dear, I'm sorry; it was all my fault."

"What's that—your fault? Well, suppose it was; I needn't have been so nasty about it." And throwing the paper to the floor Warren drew her up to his knee. "Pretty comfortable, eh?" he said, after a quiet moment.

Helen nestled closer to him.

"And I'm glad we didn go, anyway. I wasn't keen about it, were you?"

Helen shook her head. Her mind was busy with a new idea. For the first time in her life she had reasoned with herself, had forced herself out of her hurt attitude. It had worked splendidly with Warren, and, best of all, it offered a new method for solving disagreements in the future. Certain she was that Warren loved her and that she loved him, and in any married life what else mattered?

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

The Right Girl at Last

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going about with a girl counsin for about one year. My going with her was really for the sake of my people. But to tell you the truth, I don't care for her at all. I had made up my mind to forget girls, for some time, and so I did for about six months. Lately I became acquainted with one whom I dearly love and I know she cares for me. She is one year and four months my senior. My people object, saying I should not go about with her because of the difference in our ages. Now, Miss Fairfax, should I give up a girl whom I dearly love because of that?

K. K.

THEN very trifling difference in your ages should be no impediment to a happy marriage. There have been many instances where the woman has been ten to fifteen years older, and the marriage has been a complete success. The same tastes, interests, ideals are far more important factors, in happy marriage, than a trifling difference of years.

YOUTH! YOUTH! YOUTH!

—the Best Part of a Woman's Life—Why Should it Vanish So Quickly?

Don't let your youth go! And above all, don't lose your youthful appearance through old-fashioned prejudice. Women who a few years ago scorned the use of face powders or cosmetics, now depend on them to keep a youthful appearance. And this is equally true of the hair color restorer. Constantly, more and more women are using Q-ban Hair Color Restorer to keep their hair dark and glossy and free from gray.

Q-ban is not a dye. This you can prove by trying it on your combings. Dyes stain them instantly, but Q-ban has no immediate effect. Q-ban is simply a delightful liquid requisite for restoring the natural color of the hair.

Q-ban does not stain the scalp, wash or rub off or prevent washing or waving the hair. Easily applied by brushing or combing through the hair.

Sold by druggists everywhere. Q-ban Laboratories, Newark, N. J.

Q-ban is sold everywhere on Money-Back Guarantee. Price 75c.

A SHAMPOO WORTH TRYING

It is not necessary to shampoo your hair so frequently if it is entirely and properly cleansed each time by the new, dry, scientific shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers is one that removes all of the dirt, dandruff, which can be obtained from any druggist's, in a can, and a half will make a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair and scalp at one time by the top of the head. This, when rubbed into the scalp and entire hair strand of hair, chemically dissolves all impurities. It is very soothing and cooling in its action, as well as beneficial to both scalp and hair. After rinsing out the lather as created, you will find the scalp as fresh, clean and free from dandruff, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—Advertisement.

Happy Jack Squirrel's Thrift Club

By Thornton W. Burgess

Peter Rabbit Tries to Join the Club

When Peter Rabbit found that it was wholly useless to try to get Striped Chipmunk to stop work and play a little, or even gossip, he sat around and watched until he grew tired. All the time he was thinking about Happy Jack Squirrel's Thrift Club. He couldn't think of anything else. Finally he made up his mind that he would find out for himself if it were true that Happy Jack wouldn't let him join. So he started off to look for Happy Jack.

He hadn't gone far when he met Whitefoot the Wood Mouse. Whitefoot was in such a hurry that he merely nodded to Peter and would have passed right by if Peter had not stepped squarely in front of him.

"What's your hurry, Whitefoot?" demanded Peter. "Since when have you taken to treating an old friend like this? Stop and gossip a bit."

"Can't. Simply can't do it, Peter," declared Whitefoot. "Can't afford to waste the time. It's a terrible thing to waste time gossiping. Besides, it is against the rules of our club to waste time." Whitefoot said this with an air of such importance that it was really funny in such a little fellow. Peter had to grin in spite of himself.

"What club is this?" he demanded.

"Happy Jack Squirrel's Thrift Club," declared Whitefoot proudly. "I'm a member, just as soon as Happy Jack discovered that I am storing up seeds for next winter he made me a member. It's a very nice club. You ought to join it, Peter."

"I'd like to," replied Peter. "Tell me how I can."

"Why—why—why just be thrifty," replied Whitefoot, pulling his whiskers thoughtfully with his dainty white hands.

"Can't any one who isn't thrifty join?" asked Peter a wee bit wistfully.

"No siree!" declared Whitefoot. "And that reminds me that I'll lose my good standing and perhaps my membership if I sit here gossiping any longer." With a sudden bound he passed Peter and was gone.

Peter hurried on, lipperty-lipperty-lip. Presently a sharp voice hailed him.

"Hi, you long-eared lipperty-lipper! Where are you bound in such a hurry?" it demanded.

Peter didn't need even to look to know who the speaker was; it was Chatterer the Red Squirrel. Peter stopped abruptly.

"Are you a member of that Thrift Club?" he demanded.

"Certainly! To be sure! Of course!" retorted Chatterer. "I'm the thriftiest member in it. My middle name is thrift. I've got more storehouses than any three other members, and most of them are full. I wouldn't be as lazy and shiftless as some folks I might name for the world."

"Meaning who?" replied Peter, looking at the Chatterer suspiciously.

"I'm not mentioning any names," chuckled Chatterer.

"I wouldn't belong to your old club if I could," retorted Peter, though of course that wasn't the truth. "Who else belongs? I suppose you keep it all in the Squirrel family." Peter had forgotten about Whitefoot the Wood Mouse.

"That's where you suppose wrong. Try again Peter," snapped Chatterer rather sharply.

"I give it up," said he.

"Huh!" said Chatterer. "Huh! Well, if you really want to know, Jerry Muskrat is a member."

"I might have known that," said Peter.

"And Paddy the Beaver is another," continued Chatterer.

"Of course," replied Peter, just as if he had known it all along.

"And Danny Meadow Mouse," added Chatterer.

"To be sure," said Peter.

"And my cousin, Timmy the Flying Squirrel," Chatterer went on.

"He's in the family so he doesn't count," cried Peter.

"And Sammy Jay," added Chatterer.

"What?" cried Peter, sitting up very straight.

"I said Sammy Jay," repeated Chatterer, rather crossly.

"But if he can be a member I can!" cried Peter excitedly. "Why can't I, Chatterer? Why can't I?"

"Go ask Happy Jack; it's his club," replied Chatterer.

Peter went on and presently he spied Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel.

"If you please, Happy Jack, I should like to join your new club," panted Peter, without wasting any time.

Happy Jack looked up long enough to shake his head in a most decided way.

"You can't join, Peter," said he. "I'm sorry, but you can't join."

"But Sammy Jay has joined! If Sammy Jay can be a member why can't I?" cried Peter, and he was so excited that he almost stuttered.

"Because Sammy Jay is thrifty and you are not," retorted Happy Jack.

"Sammy Jay thrifty!" cried Peter. "That's a joke! How long since Sammy Jay turned thrifty?"

"He always has been thrifty," retorted Happy Jack.

"Peter," continued Happy Jack, "there isn't any one we would like to have in our club more than we would you, but you are such a happy-go-lucky fellow that I can't think of a single thrifty thing about you. Did you ever store up food enough to last you even one day?"

"No-o-o," replied Peter slowly as if it were hard work. "I can always find something to eat if I look hard enough."

"Did you dig that hole which you and Mrs. Peter call your house in the heart of the dear Old Briar-patch?" continued Happy Jack.

"No-o-o," replied Peter more slowly than before. "That's an old house of Mr. Chuck's, one he got through with long ago. It is rather rambling down, but it is good enough for us. I don't see any use wasting my toe-nails on digging when I can find a hole already dug."

"You don't eh?" exclaimed Happy Jack.

"Oh shiftless, thriftless Peter Rabbit. When laziness becomes a habit It leads to hunger, rags and tatters, And self-respect it sadly shatters."

With this Happy Jack disappeared on his way to store away some fat nuts. Peter waited a few minutes and then started for his home in the dear Old Briar-patch. Every few feet he would stop and stare at nothing in particular. Peter was thinking over what Happy Jack said.

76,000 SAILORS LEARNING TO SWIM

Instructor Sutherland Picks 20 to Carry on Work in First Naval District

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

Aboard the Receiving Ship at Boston, Mass. 21.—The first step toward making swimming compulsory in the navy was taken today. The state's amphibian instructor, Alexander Donald Sutherland, gave out a list of twenty assistants who have been selected to have charge of the teaching of the 76,000 men of the stations scattered along the coast from Maine to Chesapeake Bay.

All instructors will be under the direction of Mr. Sutherland, who will also retain control of the teaching of the men of the ship, being assisted by William Harvey.

Instructor Sutherland is the originator of the Sutherland stroke and method of teaching that will ultimately be used all over the country. He learned to swim at the Brookline Municipal Bathhouse, where his sister, Miss Katherine Sutherland, has been a swimming teacher for a number of years. Mr. Sutherland, before entering the navy, was the coach of winning swimming teams at Harvard, Phillips-Andover and Yale.

The Sutherland stroke that has received the government's approval is a modification of the overhand crawl and permits of both speed and endurance in the water.

The method of instruction is especially adapted for large classes of men. It is planned to have the classes made up of 500 members. These will begin with the land drills for the arms, which will be followed by instruction in the leg kick in shallow water.

Next the classes will be divided into two sections of 250 members each. Each section will assist each other in co-ordinating the leg and arm movements, one attempting to swim while the other stands by to assist.

In a few days swimming instruction will begin off the roof-floor of the Street Bath. Classes of eighty will go over there from the ship every afternoon for a dip in the salt water.

To keep up the interest of the men, it is planned to have some very lively swimming matches. The winners of the most popular of these matches will be awarded suitable medals, emphasis being placed upon endurance more than speed in picking the winners.

EDITORIAL

There is an opportunity for somebody to invent a light weight, serviceable hat that soldiers at Camp Devens and other cantonments can wear with comfort during the warm weather. The caps issued to the soldiers during the severe weather last winter were welcomed with joy, and some kind of a summer hat would be just as welcome.

Felt campaign hats, the official army headgear, are too heavy to be comfortable during unusually warm weather and they could well be dispensed with except on dress occasions. A substitute headpiece better adapted to the temperature could be worn by the men when drilling or doing the numerous fatigue, and other duties.

CAMP NOTES

Two more lectures for line and staff officers were held in the officers' clubhouse today and more field maneuvres were due to take place this afternoon. Four war strength platoons, one from each infantry regiment in the division, are being used by the members of the French and British military missions to demonstrate the latest methods of attack.

* * *

Lieutenant-Colonel Mooren Falls of the 58th Infantry, one of the officers who was attending the general staff school, has been transferred to Camp Lee at Petersburgh, Va., and will probably be promoted to the rank of colonel.

* * *

Next Sunday is to be known as "Comrade's Day" at all of the Y. M. C. A. huts, and each enlisted man is to be requested to write a letter to some friend in the service overseas or to some veteran of the Civil or Spanish wars.

* * *

The members of the Boston Lodge of Elks are to stage a professional show for the benefit of the soldiers in the main Knights of Columbus building tomorrow night. The Fifteen Girls' Club show is to be repeated at Knights of Columbus hut No. 2 on Thursday night.

SOUTH BOSTON BOYS SEEK COMMISSIONS

Four South Boston boys, William J. Powell of Mercer street, John F. Gallagher of Dorchester street, Walter T. Forest of Linden street and Charles McCoy of Dorchester street, have been awarded suitable medals, emphasis being placed upon endurance more than speed in picking the winners.

PUT 5,000 NEW MEN IN 76TH DIVISION

By WILLIAM FLYNN

Camp Devens, May 21.—New York men and some from Connecticut are being used to fill the vacancies in the 76th Division. Twenty-five hundred men from Camp Upton have already arrived and as many more are expected to reach here today. This transfer of troops is the first step toward bringing the New England division up to its full war strength.

The heavy drain made upon this cantonment for men needed at other cantonments or for special service here and abroad placed a severe handicap upon Major-General Harry F. Hodges and the other officers of the 76th Division.

The latest orders from the War Department, however, have led to the belief that no more members of the division are to be transferred and that the Summer will be devoted to the training of the division as a unit for overseas service.

The men who came here from Camp Upton have been in the service about a month. They passed the quarantine period at Yaphank, L. I., and instead of being shipped into the depot brigade will go directly to the various units in the division. For the present the new men are occupying rooms of the new reconstruction barracks at the Base Hospital, but many of them were expected to be transferred into the infantry regiments today.

The first of the men to arrive were received by Captain H. H. Flower, who was assisted by three lieutenants and several non-commissioned officers headed by Sergeant "Eddie" Mack of "Boston's Own." They were marched from the railroad to the new receiving station at the Base Hospital where their papers were checked up by the staff of Captain Caleb Warner, the division personnel officer. All of the men were then examined by division surgeons for communicable diseases and later assigned to barracks. The same program was followed with the men who reached here today.

A large majority of the newcomers are men who were drafted in and around New York city and most of the others are from cities and towns in the western part of Connecticut.

President Wilson's Appeal for the Red Cross

Those Who Have Not Read His Words Spoken in New York Should Certainly Do So

Those of you who have not yet read President Wilson's appeal at New York in support of the Red Cross ought to read it without fail, those who have read it ought to read it again. Excerpts from that speech make the best editorial we can publish on the Red Cross today.

Friendship is the only cement that will ever hold the world together. And this intimate contact of the Red Cross with the peoples who are suffering the terrors and deprivations of this war is going to be one of the greatest instrumentalities of friendship that the world ever knew, and the centre of the heart of it all, if we sustain it properly, will be this land that we so dearly love.

My friends, a great day of duty has come, and duty finds a man's soul as no kind of work can ever find it.

May I say this? The duty that faces us all now is to serve one another, and no man can afford to make a fortune out of this war. There are men amongst us who have forgotten that, if they ever saw it. Some of you are old enough—I am old enough—to remember men who made fortunes out of the Civil War, and you know how they were regarded by their fellow citizens. That was a war to save fellow citizens. That was a war to save one country—this is a war to save the world. And, your relation to the Red Cross is one of the relations which will relieve you of the stigma.

You can't give anything to the government of the United States, it won't accept it. There is a law of Congress against accepting even services without pay. The only thing that the government will accept is a loan and duties performed; but it is a great deal better to give than to lend or to pay and your great channel for giving is the American Red Cross. Down in your hearts you can't take very much satisfaction in the last analysis of lending money to the government of the United States, because the interest which you draw will burn your pockets, it is a commercial transaction, and some men have even dared to cavil at the rate of interest, not knowing the incidental commentary that constitutes upon their attitude.

And if you ladies and gentlemen could read some of the touching dispatches which come through official channels, for even through those channels there come voices of humanity that are infinitely pathetic; if you could catch some of those voices that speak the utter longing of oppressed and helpless peoples all over the world, to hear something like the Battle Hymn of the Republic, to hear the feet of the great hosts of liberty going to set them free, to set their minds free, set their lives free, set their children free, you would know what comes into the heart of those who are trying to contribute all the brains and power they have to this great enterprise of liberty. I summon you to the comradeship, I summon you in this next week to say how much and how sincerely and how unanimously you sustain the heart of the world.

There Can Be No Sympathy for Convicted Child-Beaters

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company.

A man and his wife, convicted of cruelly abusing and torturing the children of the man and the stepchildren of the woman, have been sent to prison for from six months to three years.

That will not heal the bruises in mind and body suffered by their innocent victims. But it will, perhaps, teach other human brutes that this sort of crime is not to be tolerated in this country.

In almost every trial someone can be found who sympathizes with the accused. In this case there was not a sympathetic spectator.

And of the millions of people who read of the trial there will not be one who has any regrets, unless they arise from the fact that the punishment was not heavier.

There are parents, of course, who still have the old-fashioned and idiotic notion that to spare the rod is to spoil the child.

Such people do not believe that they are brutal. They fancy, in a sort of muddle-brained way, that they are helping to discipline the children that they beat—that in no other way can wayward children be made to respect their parents.

The fact is that no child ever can or ever will respect the father or mother who beats it, from whatever motive.

Beating only kindles anger and resentment.

If it is continued, the anger and resentment grows till it becomes a steady, undying hatred.

The child obeys because it is obliged to obey by fear, and character is never built on fear.

The parents we speak of would be horrified if they were told that they belonged to the same class as the pair who have just been sent to prison.

But the difference in guilt is only in degree.

All inflicted pain is torture, and all beatings are inflicted pain.

Think this over, Mr. and Mrs. Parent.

Remember that your child was given to you as the greatest of Heaven's blessings, placed under your care to train and cherish and educate.

You are responsible for its body and its soul. For both you will some day have to give an accounting.

Every blow you strike, from whatever motive, is a blow at both body and soul.

If you will consider this carefully we believe you will never again strike your child.

The Light of Mercy

GARRETT P. SERVISS' ARTICLE

The Mystery of Mind Acting on Mind Opens Up a Tremendous Subject—Do These Brain Waves That Convey Impressions Through the Ether as Light and Electricity Traverse the Same Road?

By Garrett P. Serviss

"Is there such a thing as mental telepathy; i. e., as performed on the stage? For instance, is it possible for a person to look at an object and then transfer the idea or image of it to another person sitting on the stage, who is blindfolded?"—J. B. H.

STAGE exhibitions of alleged telepathy have no value as evidence, because they cannot be satisfactorily controlled by the observer. The same may be said of public exhibitions of all kinds of mysterious phenomena, such as spiritualistic "seances." The simplest principles of scientific investigation are violated, or rendered null, by the very conditions under which these shows are given. No earnest inquirer, understanding scientific methods, would think of basing a conclusion upon anything which he had seen or heard in such circumstances.

At the same time the subject of telepathy (or "thought transference") is, in itself, of fascinating interest, and the literature relating to it is as thrilling as the best collection of ghost stories and mystery tales that the imagination of fiction writers ever concocted. There are the germs of a thousand and one such tales, all ready sprouted, in the published volumes of the Society for Psychical Research.

Society's Purpose

Telepathy is one of the special subjects particularly investigated by that society, which has included many well-known men among its members, some of them conspicuous in the scientific world. Whatever may have been the shortcomings of individual members, I believe that the purpose of the society has always been a genuine search for truth, but its achievements have not been proportional to its intentions.

It has not succeeded in settling any of the questions, or clearing up any of the mysteries that it has attacked, but it has stirred up the stagnant pond where these things lurk amidst a thicket of superstitions until the inadvertent passer-by is startled by glimpses of ghostly wings fluttering for a moment in the sunlight around the borders of that gloomy mental morass.

One of the most interesting forms of telepathy is that in which an apparition of a dying, or it may be simply an absent, person is seen by a friend or acquaintance attacked at a distance which may, in some cases, amount to half the circumference of the earth. These "phantasms" are one of the particular phenomena investigated by the society. There are two opposed explanations offered to account for them. According to one the phantoms are disembodied spirits, even in the cases where the person is not dead the "disembodiment" being then supposed merely temporary.

But the other explanation, and the only one capable of anything resembling a scientific test, is that the phantoms are illusions of the sense of sight, produced by "brain waves," imagined to pass from one person to another through the ether like the radiations of light and electricity.

Sir William Crookes, who believed that he saw Home, the magician, float bodily out of one window of an upper room and in again at another window, suggested that the "waves" employed in telepathy are extremely short, shorter and more frequent than the vibrations of the X-rays.

Science's Goal

But one hard blow dealt to this theory of brain waves is that all known forms of radiant energy, without exception, and by virtue of the very nature of such action, vary in intensity according to the distance, while telepathic effects seem to be independent of distance. This is contrary to the law of even so subtle a force as gravitation.

Yet when the great mass of testimony in its favor is considered, one does not feel justified in asserting positively that such a phenomenon as telepathy is non-existent. The proper thing to say is that its existence has not been scientifically proved. If it is a physical phenomenon, continued investigation may reveal its basis; if it is "spiritual," science must let it alone, because, in that case, it lies beyond the province of science. It is mere mockery of science to seek to apply it to anything whatever that is not based upon physical laws.

On the other hand, it would be absurd to claim that science has a perfect or complete knowledge and understanding of the physical universe. Its greatest discoveries are probably yet to come, and one of the greatest of its triumphs would be a demonstration that brain communicates with brain across vast spaces and without the aid of any of our at present recognized sense organs.

If you will be thoughtful and exceedingly careful in your proceedings you may investigate telepathy for yourself. It is something that requires no instruments, no apparatus and no laboratory. You simply need a trustworthy friend who will enter into the spirit of the thing with you. Then try with him the experiment of transferring from one mind to another a thought or an image.

For instance, fix your mind on a striking picture, or a number, or a word, or a letter, or a curious object and at the same time have your friend in your thoughts and see whether, after many trials, you get any significant results. The chances are that you will arrive at nothing of definite value; but even so you will have been employing your time intelligently.

In France I Saw a Hill

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(The famous poetess, now doing war work in France, sends the following touching poem from Paris.)

Copyright, 1918, by the Star Company.

IN France I saw a hill—a gentle slope
Rising above old tombs to greet the gleam
From soft Spring skies. Beyond those skies dwells hope,
But those green graves bespeak a broken dream.

There was a row of narrow beds, new made;
Each bore a starry banner and a cross,
And each the name of one who, ere he played
His role of warrior, met earth's final loss.

They were so young! so eager for the fray,
And thoughts of glory filled each boyish heart
When over dangerous seas they sailed away
To face the foe and play some splendid part.

But in the tedious toil, the dull routine
Which must precede achievement on the field,
Disease, that secret enemy with mean,
Sly tactics, forced them to disarm and yield.

So they were buried on that hill in France,
Before their ears had heard the battle din;
Before life gave them its dramatic chance—
A lasting fame, or glorious death to win.

Yet looking up beyond their graves of green
I seem to see them wearing band and star;
Men are rewarded in the Worlds Unseen,
Not for the way they die, but what they are.

WHEN YOUTH PROMISES TO BE GOOD

By Winifred Black

"I WILL be good," said the little boy.

There he was down on the floor and hiding his face against his mother's knee. "Oh, mother, I will be good, honestly I will. I really will!"

The mother stooped and raised the little boy in her arms and held him very close, and then she sang to him, and gradually his sobs died away and he joined his clear voice to hers that was tired and no longer young. And when evening came and they sat by the fire together they were very happy—and the little boy was very good, just as he said he would be.

"I won't be naughty, mamma! Oh, I will never be naughty again!" cried the little girl, and she threw herself into her mother's arms and burst into a storm of tears. "I'm sorry—I didn't mean it. Oh, I'm so sorry! Please forgive me. I will never be naughty again!"

The mother smiled, although the tears stood in her own eyes, and she held the little girl in her arms and talked with her very gently. And when the rest came home to dinner nobody knew that the little girl had been naughty and had promised that she never would be so again.

She Understands

The next day the little boy was playing ball and he threw the ball right through the window of the neighbor's house, and the neighbor was very cross and never seemed to remember that he was once a little boy himself. Of course, it's rather hard to remember that when you have to pay the bills for window glass in these days. And the little boy was in trouble again and he was quite discouraged.

He hated to think that he had made the neighbor angry and he couldn't bear to remember the noise the ball made when it went crash through the pane of glass. But, worst of all, he hated to remember how he had promised his mother so earnestly that he would be good if she would only kiss him and hold him in her arms and sing to him.

And the very next day the little girl lost her temper and threw down a beautiful dish she was carrying and broke it all to pieces, and her mother stood and looked at her, and the little girl's heart sank and she wished that she was dead—not only because she had broken the dish, but because she had broken her word to her mother. But her mother didn't say one word and that made it all the worse. The little girl could hardly bear it to think that, after all she had promised, she was naughty again so soon.

How hard they cry, poor little things! How bitterly they repent and how ashamed they are that they have broken their word!

How can we ever be too severe with them?

Oh, if we were only half as good, and half as earnest, and half as true as they are, how many, many tears we would save in this world that's sometimes so full of tears.

Siam Inscribes Sacred Writings on Palm Paper

Siam now buys considerable quantities of foreign-made paper, but there was a time when a fair quantity of paper was made in that country. "Imports of cheap foreign paper," says Vice-Consul Carl C. Hansen, of Bangkok, in a report made public by the Department of Commerce, "have almost caused this industry to disappear. In the local paper making the bark of the khoi tree (Streblus aspera), which grows wild in Upper Siam, was made use of. The making of paper from this bark is said to be original with the Siamese, but this paper, however, is a sort of cardboard, and was chiefly used for making folded record books, while the leaves of the tailpot palm were especially prepared and inscribed with the sacred Buddhistic writings in the Cambodian characters in southern Siam and in the Laos Pali characters in northern Siam. Most of the universities in the United States possess copies of these interesting books, the best specimens of which are gilt-edged and inclosed in beautiful gold-lacquered covers."

HAPPINESS IS PRIZE SOUGHT BY ALL

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

"IF this were only otherwise, I could be perfectly happy."

That is a recurrent phrase which I encounter in almost every letter I receive—"this" covering almost every human woe from measles to mothers-in-law.

And without a doubt the writers believe what they are saying; yet equally without doubt they are mistaken. Since the days of Adam men and women have been uttering the same cry, but whenever the especial bar or disability of which they complained has been removed, they have soon found themselves as unhappy as before. A new worm appears in the apple, a new fly in the ointment.

For, if anything at all has been proven about happiness, it is that it is in no way or degree dependent upon circumstances. From the beginning man has persistently chased the "bluebird," always believing that if circumstances were just right he would be able to capture and hold it; yet ever it eludes his clutching fingers and flutters just ahead.

Circumstances! Sometimes, under the most adverse conditions, it will perch for a moment on the seeker's hand, although not to be permanently seized; again, when everything seems most favorable, it will soar farthest away. Riches are no certain snare for it, nor love, nor health, nor peace, nor virtue, in spite of the old adage, nor any of the other things we are accustomed to count as blessings.

Moneybags' Plaint

A noted millionaire, who had apparently never known a wish ungratified and who had been feted and courted and flattered all his life, on returning from a trip abroad a few years ago, said to the reporters in a moment of self-revelation: "I am the most miserable man alive."

A thousand formulas have been laid down for attaining happiness; but the truth is that it follows no formula. People find it in the strangest places and on the most unlikely occasions—in moments of agonizing pain, in the heady whirl of a business fight, in poverty, in solitude, even in the hour of dissolution.

And the reason is that happiness is always individual. What is one man's meat is another man's poison. As Arnold Bennett has recently said, each of us must define happiness for himself, for to each one happiness consists in the realization of his dream or desire, and our dreams and desires differ according to our respective characteristics and temperaments.

Bennett's Idea

Consequently, the ordinary dictionary definitions for happiness, "prosperity," "good fortune," "a state of well-being," are absurd upon their face.

Mr. Bennett himself considers that the only foundation for happiness lies in a full utilization of all one's faculties. "In my view," he says, "happiness includes chiefly the idea of classification after full, honest effort." And along the same line is this sentence from Chambers, which by a coincidence I just happened to notice at the head of the memorandum pad upon my desk: "The three great requisites for happiness are something to do, something to love and something to hope for."

Happiness, then, in the last analysis, must be simply the perfect assurance that comes from an absence of fear. The bubbling joy of childhood, the nearest approach to almost-pure happiness that we know in this life, comes from the child's lack of fear, his trusting confidence.

Indeed, Mr. Bennett himself in the article which I have already quoted, says: "No one can possibly be satisfied, and therefore no one can in any sense be happy who feels that in some paramount affair he has failed to take up the challenge of life. For a voice within him which none else can hear, but which he cannot choke, will constantly be murmuring: 'You lacked courage. You hadn't the pluck. You ran away.'"
